SEASONAL RAINFALL SHORT 10.27 INCHES BELOW AVERAGE

The rainfall for February was 2.46 inches, making the total for the season to date from September 1. 8.52 inches, a seasonal deficiency of 10.27 inches. Thus far it is the dryest season experienced in over thirty years in the Rogue River valley. Following an unusually dry season a year ago, unless heavy spring rains fall the outlook is poor for the coming harvest. Wells in many parts of the valley are dry. Nature has evidently set forth to demonstrate, once and for all, the benefit and necessity of irrigation.

The mean average rainfall for February is 3.65 inches. The monthly deficiency is 1.19 inches. The deficiency for January was in the neighborhood of three inches, and that for December nearly four inches. The average rainfall for March is 2.4 inches, for April 1.43 inches, for May 1.77 inches and for June 1.09. Should these months follow the preceding in deficiency, all records for a dry year will be smashed.

The coldest day in the month was February 14, with the thermometer at 23. The warmest was the 6th, with 64. There were 8 clear days, 4 partly cloudy and 16 cloudy.
