FRUIT CONDITION EXCELLENT WITH SEASON NORMAL

Fruit conditions in the Rogue River valley, as far as budding and blooming are concerned, are excellent, according to Fruit Inspector Jack Aitken. The season is a normal one. The buds and the blooms are from ten to fourteen days behind last year, which, it will be remembered, was a disastrous one. It was upon March 24 last year that the heaviest frost fell. At that time most of the fruit was budding and in bloom, and felt the full brunt of Jack Frost's chilly advance.

At the present time almonds and apricots are in full bloom. The Howells are well advanced and will be in blossom in a week or ten days. The Bartletts are also well advanced. Both the Howells and Bartletts will be in blossom before the peaches. The other fruit, including the apples, are in normal stages.

Spraying for scale is in full swing throughout the valley this week.

The acreage for loganberries is increasing daily, and according to Manager R. D. Hoke of the Co-operative cannery, 1915 will see the canning output of this fruit trebled. Oregon loganberries are in high demand in the east, and the demand cannot be satisfied.

SERIOUS BLOW TO SHIPPING

War risk bureau prohibit insured vessels from running the risk of blockade. YOUNG PHIL ARMOUR'S BRIDE IMITATES WOMEN OF HAREM

Phil Armour and his bride, who as Miss Gwendolin B. Congdon, watching a polo game from their racing automobile at Coronado, Cal. While Phil Armour and his bride were in Coronado, Cal., it was a subject of conjecture on the polo grounds at the club house and at the hotels, whether young Mrs. Armour was trying to introduce a new fashion in the way she wore her heavy veil or whether her husband insisted upon her keeping her face covered in the style of the women of the harem. Mrs. Phil Armour was never seen out-of-doors without a heavy gray veil, edged with black velvet, doubled and worn over the lower part of her face. The veil was both ugly and unbecoming, consequently it provoked much discussion. The Armour's are now on their way to Hawaii and they are taking the racing car, in which they are pictured with them.

The Verdict at Jacksonville

(From Grants Pass Courier.) Justice can miscarry in two directions. The Leo Frank case is an illustration of how a possibly innocent man may be rushed to the gallows through public clamor for a victim. Circumstances in the evidence surrounding the Frank case seem to indicate that justice did go astray, but the highest authority in human law is now unravelling the tangled skein. The Frank case is the one extreme to which justice may miscarry. The other extreme is represented in the trial that has just closed in Jacksonville, where Louis Martin was tried for the murder of Game Warden Arthur Hubbard. If the criticisms voiced by those who heard the evidence at Jacksonville are based on sound judgment, the Martin trial was more of a farce than the one at Atlanta, Ga. It was also just as much of a tragedy, for though its outcome may represent the other extreme of "defeated justice," it can be just as pregnant of direful consequences. Leo Frank may go to his death for a crime he never committed. But Leo Frank's life is no more valuable, its taking means no more to the Frank home and the Frank circle of friendships than did the taking of the life of Arthur Hubbard mean to Hubbard's family and Hubbard's circle of friendships. The outcome of the trial at Jacksonville, if it was a miscarriage of justice, jeopardized the lives of other Hubbards. It differs from the Frank case in that there is no appeal. Martin was acquitted. The verdict says that he was guilty of no crime. Yet public sentiment is just as persistent in saying that Frank was convicted in defiance of truth and regardless of his rights and of the ends of justice.

YOUNG COUPLE MAY HAVE ELOPED

Raymond Beige, age 21 years, and Mabel Pullen, nearly 18, are missing and relatives and friends are of the opinion that the young couple have swept aside the barrier of parental objection, eloped and been married. The couple disappeared Sunday and have not been seen since. The mother of the girl arrived last night from northern California and enlisted the aid of the local police in the search. Investigation showed the pair were of a marriageable age, as far as the law is concerned. No clues to their whereabouts have been found. Beige was employed at the Pacific Highway garage, and quit work last Thursday, following a quarrel with his sweetheart. After an absence of a couple of days he returned to his work, saying that he had been sick. It now develops that this time was occupied in affecting a reconciliation and laying plans for his departure. The relatives of Miss Pullen objected to her marriage to Beige. Both the young people are well known in this city. The case was first presented to the juvenile authorities.

PLAN CELEBRATION FOURTH OF JULY FOR MEDFORD

Medford will celebrate the Fourth of July, according to a decision reached by the merchants at their regular monthly meeting held in the basement of the Christian church on Monday night. It is planned to be the biggest celebration of the nation's birthday ever held in southern Oregon, with a picnic and barbecue for all of Jackson county as the main features. Committees of members of the Merchants' association and Commercial club will be appointed at once and work on the plans begun.

W. A. Gates, who for ten years was connected with the second largest mail order house in the world, spoke upon "Mail Order Houses" in the principal address of the evening, and showed the merchants how to meet their strongest competitor.

George Wilson made a talk on "Pessimism," in which he said Medford was the best advertised city on the coast, but no one at home would believe this. He urged that all business men "perk up" and show more of the progressive spirit.

J. H. McGuirk talked on the need of patronizing home industry, and Manager R. D. Hoke of the Co-operative Canning company, told of the bright outlook for the coming season. The home industry committee showed that Medford possessed twenty-seven industries with a payroll of $25,000 monthly.

The Golden Rule and Medford Concrete Construction company were voted in as new members.

A chicken dinner was served by the ladies of the Christian church. It was one of the most beneficial meetings in the history of the association.

U. S. NAVY MOST EFFICIENT

(Continued from Page 1.) never was a time when it was so important for our country to set the warring world an example of peace. May we not hope that the day is not far distant when the nations at war will solicit our good offices in leading the way to honorable peace. The secretary said that the country was fortunate in its chief executive, and that the mantle of justice and peace of the martyred Lincoln had fallen upon the shoulders of Wilson to guide the ship of state in the present situation.
