UNION OIL TO ENTER MEDFORD

The Union Oil company of California—the strongest competitor of the Standard Oil—will construct a $25,000 storage plant according to present plans, at Crater Lake Junction. Work upon the plant will begin about the first of April. A representative of the company spent Thursday in Medford arranging for the securing of the land. The contracts for the construction work will be let at once. The plant will be used as a distributing center for the southern Oregon and northern California oil trade.

HAFER PURCHASES LUMBER PLANTS

Edgar S. Hafer has traded 440 acres of timber land in the Butte Falls district to the John F. Owens Lumber company for all the machinery and manufacturing equipment of the Ernest Hart estate purchased by the Owens company. The equipment includes two sawmills and a box factory and logging machinery. This is one of the steps in Mr. Hafer's plan for the establishment of a co-operative lumber and box mill in this valley, which it is proposed to organize with local capital.

DIVINE HEALER FORCED TO FLEE FROM MEDFORD

C. E. Dodge, a divine healer and apostle of a form of Holy Rollerism, left town last Saturday, upon warning from the brother of one of his women converts, never to return. The flock he founded, numbering about fifty, a large colony of which live in the Griffin Creek district, is still intact, the prophecy regarding the destruction of Medford, published in the Mail Tribune Thursday, being a sample of the fanaticism spread. There are a number of members of his peculiar creed in this city.

A relative of one of Dodge's converts called upon the preacher at his room in the Holland hotel last Saturday and issued an ultimatum that he must leave town in forty-eight hours or suffer arrest. Dodge did not wait for the expiration of the ultimatum, but departed Saturday, he said, for Seattle. This course was taken to avoid publicity attached to a legal procedure, and because of the prominence of the people involved.

Dodge lived in this city about six months and posed as being able to cure pain and sickness by "laying on hands." He also preached the early destruction of the world by fire, and kept his converts in a religious frenzy, some bordering upon hysteria. Most of his flock were people of deeply religious natures, making them easy victims of his artifices. Though the leader has gone, his influence still exists, his final injunction being that "he was being persecuted by non-believers."

In effecting a cure the Rev. Dodge held the hand of the patient, and after a season of prayer asked: "Don't you feel better?" Most of the members were women. Dodge last fall held a series of revival meetings in this city. Dodge called his church "Medford Christian Assembly" and held meetings every Sunday afternoon, sometimes at St. Mark's or other halls, advertising "full gospel teaching, including divine healing, the baptism of the spirit, Christ's coming, etc."

Only Two Weeks Until Easter Let Your Easter Outfit Be a "Style-Craft" Garment

Ask the Women Who Wear Them

WHAT they think of Style-Craft man-tailored coats and suits. They'll tell you—every one of them they're "refreshingly unusual" by comparison with ordinary ready-to-wear garments and typify the smart notes of the season's fashions.

No. 603—The "Redfern" suit. New flare jacket with side pleats. Ornamented at waist line in back with cord and buttons of self material. Soft roll collar in back, with overlay of corded Dresden silk. Fancy buttons fasten the front. New flare skirt with deep yoke, ornamented with buttons at sides. Fabrics are poplins and gabardines—black, navy, Belgian blue, sand, putty and green.

They're not like other clothes, but each Style-Craft garment expresses the ideal of the designer as interpreted by experts in the art of man tailoring. They're individual—distinctive and they embody the lines and modeling of the "correct" fashions for the season.

Dr. Csler on Tubercularis

Dr. William Csler, one of the foremost of living medical men, foremost of Johns Hopkins and other great schools of medicine in the practice of medicine in 1915, on page 251 of "The Healing of Tubercularis" states: "In the production of tubercularis a very large percentage of the smaller tubercular areas become surrounded with lime salts. To such conditions should the great healing be applied."

Many eminent medical authorities have testified to the efficacy of this remedy in the treatment of tuberculosis and the strength of this remedy in the healing of tubercularis. It is a true and successful remedy for tubercularis, and it is a true and successful remedy for tubercularis.
