The only difficulty regarding a Carnegie Library that we have ever heard is that with reference to the library in Medford, Oregon. Where there is one city dissatisfied, it is safe to say there are hundreds that are morethan pleased. A city that is going down hill might object to keeping up such a library as Medford has, but the cities of California are not going in that direction. Oakdale certainly is not,

Passing the slur upon Medford, which to be expected from California towns, the uncalled-for and unjustifiable attack upon the public library is amazing. It would be interesting to learn the source and object.

The assertions made are false in every particular. The Carnegie library has given universal satisfaction and proved a great convenience to the city, as well as a source of profit and pleasure to thousands. It has had a very rapid growth, and despite constantly increasing facilities finds it difficult to keep up with public demands.

No portion of the taxation is more cheerfully paid or more wisely expended than that for the library and the only regret is that more funds are not available.

If a vote were taken today upon the continuance of the library, it is safe to say that there would not be a vote cast in the city against it.
