DEMON RUM ON THE RUN

TWO years ago the conventional, standpat world af-▲ fected to be shocked because Secretary of State Bryan served grape juice instead of wine to the foreign diplomats at a state function. The plutocratic press ridiculed and denounced the action as an insult.

Now, however, comes King George of England with a formal decree forbidding the use of vincous, spirituous and intoxicating liquors in the royal household, and at state functions. There is nothing said to ridicule the king for following the example set by Bryan, who, as has so often been the case, was a little in advance of his time.

Shortly after Bryan scandalized society by his practice of temperance, Secretary Daniels issued orders forbidding the use of intoxicating liquors by officers upon the ships of the navy. The rank and file had been forbidden liquor for years, but because Mr. Daniels believed that if abstinance was essential for the men, it was still more essential for their commanders, he also was made the target for unlimited abuse and ridicule.

Now, however, comes General Kitchener, forbidding the use of intoxicating liquors as far as his authority goes, and recommending total prohibition for the army. General Joffre, commander of the French, has already promulgated a prohibition edict for the French army. Czar Nicoolas of Russia has stopped the manufacture, sale and use of vodka, not only for the Russian army, but for the nation as well. Kaiser Wilhelm prohibits the use of intoxicating liquors in his army. We hear no abuse or ridicule of Kitchener, Joffre, the ezar or the kaiser.

hibition. Most of the balance have local option and are "dry" in the greater part of their territory. As a matter of fact, three-quarters of the nation's area is practically or beef stock and simmer fifteen min-"dry"—that is, cleared of saloons, and the liquor business utes. Rub through a collander and flourishes only by the mail-order package, which will set in place to keep hot. Cook toeventually have to go also.

There is a reason for the world-wide fight on boozeand that reason is the need of increased efficiency. The then add slowly the beet and mutton war has shown Europe that booze impairs efficiency-and mixture. Season with salt and adash booze must go. Even Japan has climbed on the water of cayenne, serve hot in cups with dot wagon and the great breweries have been forced to close. of whipped cream on top.

Before the war England's consumption of booze was: Malt liquors, 1,397,314,800 gallons; wines, 15,206,400 gallons; alcohol, 40,078,000 gallons. Russia drank 231,445,000 REFUSE WRIT TO gallons of malt liquors, 25,000,000 gallons of wines and 238,347,000 gallons of alcohol. France consumed yearly 375,729,000 gallons of malt liquors, 1,541,406,000 gallons of wines and 70,903,000 gallons of alcohol.

Alcoholism threatened the world as one of its greatest menaces and most costly luxury. It involved economic waste as well as impaired efficiency. Hence alcoholism for a writ of mandamus to compet must go-and sooner or later must go everywhere.
