LAUGHS

Undone Pat—Kehoe gave a dermatologist $20 for changing his pug nose into a Grecian nose! Mike—He did! Pat—He did! Next day Callahan knocked it back into a pug nose again for nothing at all.—Kansas City Times.

Distressed Him "You called me a bone headed jelly-fish?" "Yes." "Well, I don't care about your opinion, but for heaven's sake, don't mix your metaphors."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Beginning to Tell "The prohibition wave has hit Crimson Gulch pretty strong," remarked Broncho Bob. "Why, I saw every man in the place lined up at the bar." "Yes. But seven or eight of the men are learnin' to take water on the side."—Washington Star.

Filling the Paper "I think," said the editor, in a worried tone, "that I will drop journalism and take to astronomy." "Why?" "Because astronomers have more space than they know what to do with."—Herald and Presbyter.

All Included Visitor (sampling Belfast stout with evident appreciation).—Really this is splendid stuff. They say that it is both meat and drink. Workman (interrupting)—Shure, an' it's right ye are, sor; an' if ye take plenty av it it'll foind ye lodgings, too.

In Favor of It "I hear you are having a 'Take it Back' campaign in this town." "Yes," admitted the Plunkville citizen. "Have you borrowed something?" "Oh, no. I want to see a man who called me a liar about three years ago."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LETTING DEATH HAVE HIS WAY

IN America one-third of all the people who die are victims to lung diseases—pneumonia and tuberculosis. If pneumonia were a beast, with sharp teeth and claws and a fierce appetite for human flesh, you would put locks on your doors, arm yourself and fight for your life. If somebody told you to let the beast into your house and lock your doors and bar your windows so that the beast couldn't get out until he had made a meal of you, you would look on that advisor as an enemy or a fool.

If tuberculosis were a ravenous bird of the carnivora sort, with sharp, hooked beak, mighty talons and fierce appetite for the flesh of children, you'd strive mightily to protect your little ones and turn a deaf ear to those who should declare that that terrible bird was a good thing to have in the house.

But, without beak, teeth or claw, pneumonia and tuberculosis kill. Ignorance and recklessness enable them to kill one-third of all Americans who die, every year. If these things wore claws and teeth, how the world would laugh at us if we permitted them to kill us off at such a rate. But we know that they kill through carbonic acid gas, foul air. To neglect to fight them off with fresh air is as foolish as to neglect to use a gun against a howling, hungry wolf. With what horror would we look upon the man who made his children sleep on the front steps with lions, tigers and other beasts roaring about the house. But he would be no more foolish than he who makes his children sleep in an atmosphere laden with carbonic acid gas. Death is there in one case as certainly as in the other. The only difference is a difference in the sorts of stupidity. It is simply letting Death have his way because he isn't rigged out in bristly hair, gleaming fangs and tearing talons. And fresh air is cheap.

DR CARMEN TELLS OF FATAL SHOT

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 7.—Dr. Edward Carman described on the witness stand today in his wife's trial on the charge of murder, the shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey in his office in Freeport, June 30 last. His story was identical with that related by him in the first trial. Mrs. Carman, who had prepared to testify in her own behalf late today, followed his testimony closely.

BETHLEHEM STEEL RISES 6 POINTS

NEW YORK, May 7.—Price changes at the outset of today's market operations reflected further irregularity and confusion, due in part to London, where Americans were heavy. War specialties were not especially prominent, except Bethlehem Steel, which soon rose 6 points to 154, one point under its record price. Reading was heaviest of the leading shares, although coppers, particularly Amalgamated and Anaconda, reacted sharply. United States Steel was barely steady, while other prominent issues moved variably. The list steadied later and trading became dull.

MARY FULLER'S FIRST PICTURE—STAR TELLS THRILLS OF INITIAL APPEARANCE IN SCREEN PRODUCTION

Viewing Pictures Helps Movie Actors Remedy Shortcomings, She Says— Takes Notes on Pictures to Improve Her Acting, an Advantage That is Denied Stage Performers.

(By Mary Fuller.) (Written especially for this newspaper. Copyright, 1915, by Floyd.)

CHAPTER V.

Of course, the first time I had even a "bit" in the movies I took the first opportunity I could get to take a look at myself on the screen, but that was as nothing to my feelings when I really had a part.

It is some thrill I want to tell you to appear on the screen and in the audience at one and the same time. That is an advantage we have over the ordinary theater.

I remember I was cast for the part of a little Italian girl. I was very much afraid of failing and it took me some time to get over my camera fright and immerse myself in my character.

Some of the studio managers, who saw the film first, told me it was a success, but it was some time before I sat in the audience and took a look—oh, such a tense look!

It was an odd sensation. Could that little figure flit-flit-flicker across the white sheet in that intense white and black be myself? That Mary Fuller up there had my face and form, she walked as I do. She gesticulated. She moved her lips. But I heard no words.

The Mary Fuller I knew loved to chatter and she was round and this Mary Fuller was flat, merely a picture on the screen. The Mary Fuller I knew! and then I had to pinch myself and tell myself that the Mary Fuller I knew was myself, the young woman sitting there in the audience.

The first feeling of strangeness passed and then I began critically to watch the pictures. I saw that Mary Fuller doing some things so effectively and other things so badly and made mental notes of how to cure the defects.

I was in a turmoil of admiration and of fearful indulgence for that

Mary Fuller. After that my dreams were gradually realized. I was "featured" and finally "starred" in the movies. I did not fully realize the last happy state until one day I passed a theater where one of my films was being shown. The front of the place was plastered with my name.

Then I realized that in a measure I had really "arrived." It's a delightful feeling and sends a lovely little shiver all over you. And the pleasure never palls. (Continued tomorrow.)

RESERVE DECISION IN THAW APPEAL

NEW YORK, May 7.—The appellate division of the supreme court heard argument today and reserved decision on the state's application for a writ of injunction to prevent a jury from passing on the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw. A decision, it is believed, will be announced soon.
