LAUGHS

No Inducement Motorist (blocked by load of hay) "I say, there, pull out let me by. Farmer—"Oh, I dunno ez I'm in any hurry."

Motorist (angrily)—You seemed in a hurry to let that other fellow's carriage get past. Farmer—"That's because his horse wuz eatin' my hay. There ain't no danger o' yew eatin' it, I reckon.—Boston Transcript.

Never Cramped. Silas—I hear your son left that small town and went into the city to have a larger field for his efforts. Hiram—Yes; and that's what gets me. When Hank was home, a two-acre potato patch was too big a field for him.—Judge.

A Prophet "What is your occupation?" asked the judge of a witness. "Same old thing, judge—pravin' for rain or shine as they're needed, an' predictin' the end of the world whenever the signs p'int that way."

His Stamping Ground Jolly Man (whose appetite is the envy of all his fellow boarders)—Well, I never! I've lost two buttons off my vest. Lady of the House (who has been wanting to give him a hint)—You will most likely find them in the dining room, sir.

Making One "Senator, you promised me a job." "But there are no jobs." "I need a job, Senator." "Well, I'll ask for a commission to investigate as to why there are no jobs and you can get a job on that."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Difference The pessimist can only see A patch of smelly mud; The optimist quite readily Discerns the lily bud. —Portland Journal.

Qualifying Johnny Jones, the office boy, had been detected in a lie. It was not one of the ordinary prevarications of the everyday world, and, moreover, to make the crime more grievous, he had persisted in adhering to his original mendacious statement. "Do you know, my lad," asked a fatherly clerk, in a kindly fashion, "what becomes of young lads who trifle with the truth?" "Aye," was the assured reply; "houses send them out as drummers when they grow up."

In Father's Wingbeats "Do you believe in heredity?" "I certainly do. Take those Wright brothers, aviators; their father was a sky-pilot, wasn't he?"—Chicago Tribune.

Small Mind She—I hear you and Grace quarreled last night. He—Yes, I was angry and spoke my mind. She—Yes, she said you went away without a word.

A Neglected Bit The poets have sung In every known tongue Of sweethearts and love's youthful dream; In verse that is glad Or sublimely sad They scatter their dross by the beam.

Affinity stuff And "triangle" guff In poems of passion are rife; But no one takes time To pound out a rhyme On the love of a husband and wife —Pensacola Journal.

Dramatic Note "Why is a cigar like a play?" "Because if it's bad it won't draw, and if it's good you want a box."

THE TRADE BALANCE

THE balance of trade in favor of the United States will exceed a billion dollars at the close of the fiscal year this month. This means that the United States has produced and exported a billion dollars more products than were imported.

While the great increase in exports and decrease in imports is due wholly to the European war, it is not due to the exportation of war munitions. It is due entirely to the increased exportation of foodstuffs. Exports of manufactures of all kinds, other than food products, have been far less than in similar periods before the war.

The United States is feeding the warring nations, but not furnishing any great quantity of ammunition and ordnance, despite German clamor to the contrary. European markets for the bulk of manufactured products have been cut off and production thereby curtailed in the United States. A few scattered industries have been stimulated by the conflict, but the general result has been depression. The effect is the same as if a high tariff had cut off European competition with our own industries and retaliative tariffs had closed European markets, except food products and war specialties, to our own products. It is the ideal of protective tariff realized.

Madame Schumann-Heink's Advice to the June Brides

"Use Tact, Be Just, Play the Game Fair If You Would Be Successful Wife," Warns Noted Opera Singer.

(By Madame Schumann-Heink, the famous diva.)

"But," I hear some young girl say who is about to marry, "this teaching girls from the cradle to be successful wives is a splendid idea and I shall begin with my daughters just as soon as possible—if I have any; but my mother did not teach me to keep house and take care of children. I have been taught that when a man is looking for a wife he is not looking for children's nurse nor a housekeeper, nor even a healthy woman to breed his children.

"I love the man I am going to marry devotedly and I know he loves me—we are unhappy out of each other's sight. Surely there is no possibility that we who love each other so unutterably will not be happy when we are made one in reality, as we are now in mind and heart."

My dear girl, you have started from the wrong premises. It is a human impossibility for two people to be "one in mind and heart." To be so they must have the same tastes, the same desires, the same ambitions, the same hopes, the same pride, the same prejudice and exactly the same viewpoint and standpoint in life.

They must have been born with the same temperament, bred in the same environment and educated along the same lines. You can see that all this is an impossibility. But only couple who marries must adjust these differences in fundamentals, and right here it is a good place for me to say that a successful marriage is like a successful political intrigue—a series of compromises.

We can gain some things by giving up others, and the first thing a successful wife should learn is that the little things don't count much.

Whether you go to a musical comedy or grand opera is not worth fighting about, because most of you can go to the musical comedy with your husband at night, if that is the one he prefers, and to a grand opera matinee in the afternoon by yourself. But whether your children shall be given the proper education or allowed to leave school too soon is a thing to fight about, provided your husband band is not on the side of the education. You see my point. Use tact, be just, play fair, but stick to your principles, for without doing all these you may lose your husband devotedly and still be an unsuccessful wife. (Another Schumann-Heink article to-morrow.)

MEDFORD WINS FROM YREKA IN CLOSEST OF GAMES

Medford defeated Yreka Sunday afternoon before a fair-sized crowd by the score of 4 to 3 in the best game of ball witnessed in this city in years. The result was in doubt for the entire nine innings, and was full of thrilling moments. None of the errors of either team was costly. Good pitching by Caster, who was somewhat wild, for the locals, and Brooks for Yreka, kept the score down.

Caster played an important part in the scoring, laying out a three-bagger to deep right and a two-base hit. His feat was duplicated by Chase, who sent the ball to deep center. Ralph Burgess appeared as umpire and did a good job. In the closing innings the visitors howled at a couple of his decisions, but they did not change the result.

The article of ball served was a surprise to the fans and insured a larger crowd at the next appearance. Medford appears to have the fastest team in his history.

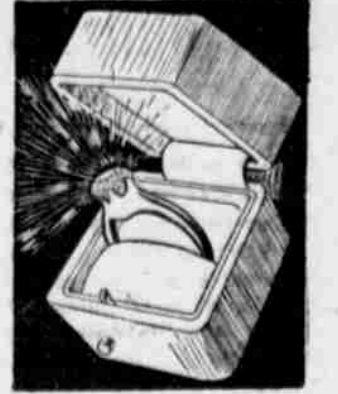

Summary—Earned runs, Yreka 1; three-base hits, Chase, Caster; two-base hits, Maher, Calkins, Caster; first on balls, off Brooks 3, off Caster 10; passed balls, Latge 1, Hill 1; hit by pitcher, Hopkins; left on bases, Yreka 6, Medford 5; double plays, McKee to Miles to Hopkins. Time of game, two hours.
