THE YAQUI REVOLT

NEWS comes from Mexico that the Yaqui Indians have declared war upon the United States, Mexico and Germany.

It is not to be wondered at, as Americans and Germans are aggressors upon the Indian domain, recipients of property stolen from the Yaquis by Mexico, because of which the Yaquis long have vigorously fought for freedom.

The Yaqui are a tribe of the Pimen Indians, the southern branch of the Shoshones, and are the most intelligent and highly civilized of the Indians of North America. They are the cause of the perennial warfare of the Yaqui is the rounding territory, follow agriculture, and while industrious, are liberty loving.

The cause of the perennial warfare of the Yaquis is the spoliation of their territory and the enslavement of their people. Land owned and farmed by them for centuries has been ruthlessly bartered away to Mexicans and foreigners and the real owners reduced to peonage. Millions of Yaqui acres have gone as corrupt "concessions" from Mexico City for a song.

It is currently reported in Sonora that the vast tracts to which Hearst and Otis claim title were bestowed upon them by the Diaz regime in return for newspaper support. Whether true or not, it is true in so many other instances as to be typical of the methods against which the Yaqui rebel.

The holders of this stolen property now look to the United States and other nations to support their claims and the United States has sent a warship and 300 marines to rescue besieged foreigners, who, as a matter of fact, have no business remaining in the war-torn region and have been repeatedly warned by their home governments to leave.

A few months ago these concessionaires and other fortune hunters like them were loudly clamoring for armed intervention in Mexico in order to make good their claims to loot by the sacrifice of American dollars and American blood. Fortunately a man of peace sat in Washington and a needless war of aggression and spoliation was averted.

The cause of the Yaqui uprising is the root of the revolution in Mexico—the looting of the land of the people for the benefit of privileged classes, and the consequent enslavement of the masses. In primitive Mexico the land was tribal and community property and every family farmed its allotment. The work of confiscation began by the Spaniards was completed under Diaz and large estates for favorites were created out of the people's domain—and peonage supplanted independence.

Peace and harmony will not reign in Mexico permanently until the land is restored to the people, as in all justice it should be. Revolution will succeed revolution as long as the cause of revolution is undisturbed—and it is the recognition of this by all factions that colors with hope the present chaos.

The Yaqui are fighting for simple justice, for a restoration of ancestral domain. They are as right in their efforts to oust the greedy invader as the Belgians in their efforts to expel the German barbarians who have laid waste their cities and brought desolation to hearths and ruin to their fields.

Betrayed by Mexico and foreigners alike, betrayed in turn by the various factions fighting for the mastery of Mexico, it is no wonder that the Yaqui have declared the independence of Sonora and established a republic, defying the world—for the Yaqui are fighting the old battle of freedom, the revolt of the liberty-loving against oppression, pauperism and slavery, and have found no one they could trust—not even the liberty-loving republic of the north, whose citizens are numbered among their despoilers.

THE WAYS OF MOVIE MAIDS—THEIR LOVES AND AMBITIONS

PAULINE BUSH

(By Esther Hoffmann.)
"Love in a cottage built for two is a great proposition and filled with a lot of happiness. But to an actress who feels as hopeful for the future as I do—well, I couldn't resign myself to dreaming through a contented sort of existence." That is the excuse pretty Agnes Vernon gives for breaking the heart of her sweetheart, Abe Deuce, by jilting him when he refused to listen to her remaining in the movies.

She told her story to Pauline Bush, who is leading lady in the same movie company, and who just huddles over with ambition.

A few weeks later pretty Pauline was married to Allan Dwan, who used to direct her work years ago when she played opposite Warren Kerrigan in western pictures. Although Mr. and Mrs. Dwan are on their honeymoon at present, they will not be absent long, for their work will not allow it.

"I got married to make my future," said Pauline Bush, with a happy smile. "And I didn't get married so that I could make mine," answered Agnes Vernon.

Madame Schumann-Heink's
Advice to the June Brides

"There Are Certain Things Every Young Wife Should Not Tell Her Husband If She Would Hold His Love," Declares Famous Singer.

(By Madame Schumann-Heink, the famous diva.)
One of the great assets of a successful wife is secretiveness.

Now, my dear little bride-to-be, don't look at me with such horror, for I know whereof I speak.

I expect you will throw up your pretty chin and say, with a disdainful shrug of your pretty shoulders: "I shall have no secrets from my husband."

That is all right, my dear girl, in the things that concern both of you, but there are many things which we should share with no human being.

In the first place, all men look for secrets—in their business, in their pleasures, in their lives.

You Americans have a slang phrase which I believe you attribute to some "man from Missouri," who said, "You have to show me."

This, like many other slang expressions, is expressive, and it means much to the successful wife.

"But that is not being secretive," you exclaim.

You can show your husband results, but if you would be happy I advise you to be chary of giving him the details in achieving those results.

You did not tell him before marriage that your beautiful complexion was retained and made more beautiful by the copious use of cold cream and other angelic and just the finest soap of powder—did you? Then, why initiate him into the secrets of your toilet after marriage?

Neither must you feel called upon to tell him the things that your women friends tell you in confidence. Some of the sweetest friendships I have ever known have been ruined because a bride has told her husband some little escapade on the part of one of her chums, and he has looked upon the girlish indiscretion with horror and forbade his wife to be friendly with her girlhood companion forever after.

You have no more right to tell your husband what is told you in confidence by some other woman than you have to tell it to some other man.

If you feel that you cannot keep these confidences from your husband you must meet every profane of them with: "Do not tell me this unless you'd just as soon say my husband should know it—I tell him everything."

TURKISH TROOPS
REPULSED TRYING TO RETAKE LINE

LONDON, June 17.—Turkish troops in the Dardanelles have been repulsed in their attempts to recapture the trenches lost by them to the British on June 12, according to an official statement on the situation in the Dardanelles made public today.

The text of the announcement follows:

"On the night of June 15 a party of the enemy, led by a German officer, made a gallant attack on the trenches occupied by the British brigades. A few of the enemy were killed on the parapet, but majority of them fell before reaching our trenches. Fifty dead were counted, including the German leader and his Turkish subordinate.

"These trenches were captured by us on the night of June 12. After a strong attack the Turkish positions were enfiladed by our machine guns from right to left. The British troops attacked with the bayonet. When the trenches were occupied they were found to contain 200 dead Turks. Twelve prisoners were also taken. Our casualties were very slight."
