HONG KONG KOLUM

CHINA BOY SAYS:

MELICAN MAN SAY "WASTE MAKE WASTE" THEN SAY "HULLY UP SHIRTS JOHN" ALEE SAME KICK WHEN COLLAR CUTTIEF NECK.

FORDS FOREMOST

Speaking of Henry Ford one day, a man remarked: "Oh, yes, I used to know him back in the good old days when an empty coal wagon was the noisiest thing on earth."

"Why on a Ford like a bathtub?" "Because you hate to be seen in either of them."

A man saw an advertisement of a farm for sale, and went out to look it over. The lay of the land was ideal, the horses and cattle were fat and sleek, and everything was fine except the hogs. They were so thin he could almost read a newspaper through them, and, naturally, he asked why.

The pigs' mother died, the owner said, when they were only a few days old, and his wife attempted to raise them by hand. Whenever she went out to feed them, she called them by rattling a dishpan. Everything went well until so many Fords passed their place that the pigs just ran themselves almost to death.

A Hot One

His Satanic Majesty is visiting autoist? Well, did you choose the car you want?

V. A.: But, Your Majesty, they are all Fords.

H. S. M.: Sure. That's the hell of it!

For this one we are indebted to a reader in Waterbury, Conn.: There is no significance in the "Con," as the clipping attached is a genuine cutting from the classified advertising columns of the Waterbury American.

Two men entered a soft drink emporium and gave their orders. The one ordered a milk shake, upon which the other said: "You'd better make that just a plain milk. You know you're going home with me in no Ford."

A man, while taking a demonstration in a Ford, remarked to the demonstrator: "This car seems unusually small."

The demonstrator replied: "Yes, it is a little smaller than the usual Ford. Its motor was seized by a motorcycle."

First Aid

The day was warm and the man was freely perspiring through the vain efforts to start his Ford. He would crank with both hands, then laboriously climb into the front seat to fuss with the levers; but in spite of his activities the engine refused to run. A little girl ran up and regarded the machine intently. At last she said: "Don't you think it would play if you put on a new needle motor?"

"What are you wriggling and wriggling around so far?" "I visited the Ford factory today, and I'm afraid I've got some of them in me."

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES

THERE is a good market for all the berries, cherries, small fruits, beans and vegetables that can be grown in the valley.

These crops have been neglected because no effort has previously been made for marketing. This year, however, the Rogue River Fruit & Produce association has enlarged its field of operations and is marketing all crops. In addition, there is a commission house that cannot secure produce needed.

Orders for peas and beans, for cherries and berries remain unfilled for lack of produce. One order for fifty crates a day of blackberries for three months remains unfilled because there are not that many blackberries grown in the valley.

Local canneries are unable to operate continuously because of lack of product. Although canneries are willing to enter into contracts with growers upon an acreage basis, sufficient acreage cannot be secured.

There are thousands of acres of idle land too shallow for orchards, but ideal for berries. All they require is a minimum amount of care and water.

The Fruit association has marketed seven or eight tons of cherries at satisfactory prices. W. E. Phipps, owner of the Gold Bottom cherry orchard at Gold Hill, says there is more money in cherries than in any other fruit, and has the figures to prove it. Rogue River valley cherries stand shipment better than any grown elsewhere, in proof of which he shows figures realized on fruit shipped as far east as New York, where the cherries topped the market.

We have three creameries in the valley. None of them secure enough cream. There is a market for ten times the output. The opportunity is here. This could become one of the great dairying districts of Oregon. The creameries—at least one of them—is willing to help finance the dairyman.

To produce, what the valley is capable of producing, either in vegetables, berries, fruit or grain and alfalfa, irrigation is necessary. The sooner it is realized, the better. Land with water is worth double the price of the same land without, because crops are assured, regardless of weather. But even those who have irrigation or can easily obtain it, do not make the most of their opportunities.

Poultry is another neglected industry. An average annual profit of one dollar per hen is guaranteed, yet the local poultry company cannot begin to fill the orders it receives.

The creation of prosperity lies with ourselves. Hard work is its basis. Boasted German "efficiency" is simply another name for intelligent, hard work. Whatever the German does he does well, and he makes a success of whatever he does because he is not afraid of work.

To become prosperous we must produce more. The time has arrived when if we do not we will slip backward. We have an ideal climate and nature does more than elsewhere. If we fail, we must not look to the war as an excuse, or to the tariff or any other psychological cause—just to ourselves. We have not taken advantage of our opportunities. We do not produce enough.

An irrigation system lies within our reach, and we won't reach for it. A large output for our canneries is also within our reach, but we won't reach for it. Markets are within our grasp for every product we can raise—yet we do not grasp them.

A land that does not help itself is not worth being helped. Let us help ourselves and create our own prosperity.

HUERTA'S TRIAL SET FOR JULY TWELFTH

EL PASO, Tex., July 1.—The case against Victoriano Huerta, Pascual Orozco and four others, charged with conspiracy to violate the United States neutrality laws, was postponed today to July 12. The defendants were continued under the same bonds. The postponement was granted on request of attorneys for the prosecution. R. E. Crawford, assistant United States attorney, stated that the government had been unable to collect and arrange all its evidence or to bring important witnesses into court, that the state would proceed to trial on July 12.

HOTTEST WEATHER OF THE YEAR HERE

The hottest weather of the season is being experienced over the Rogue River valley today and Wednesday, when the mercury rose over the 100 mark. Wednesday the temperature rose to 104, and at noon today the mercury registered 99 degrees, with the probability that it will equal or exceed the season's high-water mark. The weather report for tonight is probable cooler. The United States weather bureau at Washington, D. C., in its holiday prediction for Oregon, forecasts showers for July 1. Wednesday night the minimum temperature was 64 degrees. The heat is fine for the corn, but that is about all.

FIVE SOUTH DAKOTA CITIES CLOSE SALOONS

ABERDEEN, S. D., July 1.—Curfew at 9 o'clock last night sounded the death knell to saloons in five large cities of South Dakota and many smaller towns. Aberdeen is the largest of these cities, and while the liquor element is still clinging to a slender thread of a reversal of Judge Bonck's "dry" order by the supreme court, all have ordered their stocks preparatory to moving.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

"Train Your Lips to Express Beauty" Advises Lillian Gish, Movie Star

Miss Lillian Gish posing especially to illustrate beauty article.

BY ESTHER HOFFMANN. One of the prettiest mouths that speaks the eloquent, silent language of the moving pictures is that of Lillian Gish. She has the short upper lip that is shaped like a cupid's bow and the under lip that some poet has described as "being stung by the bee that was sipping honey there." It is a mouth made for expressing love, although it has the soft curving line of a child. "A girl who has a beautiful mouth will always be called lovely," a man said to me the other day, and yet few women train their lips to express beauty. "Can you train your lips to express beauty?" asked. "You can train your mouth to express anything," she answered, uncompromisingly, indeed, you are always training your mouth to express something. "If you think of thoughts your mouth will be just and exact." "If you love me one and hate upon the bright sea of life you will keep the sweet, true mouth of a little child to the end of your whole life." "Pretty good body philosophy, don't you think?"
