MINNESOTANS WELCOMED BY LOCAL COLONY

Welcomed by the local Minnesota colony, Governor Winfield Scott Hammond and party of fifty enroute to the San Francisco exposition were greeted at Medford Tuesday.

Asked regarding the presidential outlook, Governor Hammond said: "If there were no war, the 1916 presidential campaign would be a close race between Woodrow Wilson and some strong republican such as Weeks of Massachusetts. But under the circumstances, the people realize that Wilson is handling the international situation admirably and they will, in my judgment, keep him in the white house while the war and the subsequent adjustments are on."

"The people are realizing also this is not a time for politics but for patriotism. "I know Senator Weeks well and I know President Wilson well. Both are admirable men and represent the best there is in American citizenship. They would make an ideal race. The people could make no mistake in choosing either. But the war is a factor and the whole structure of international negotiation should be maintained just as it has begun. After the war, I would be willing to see the old partisan method of choosing a president go on."

Governor Hammond was formerly congressman from a heavy republican district and spoke as a non-partisan.

AL JOLSON AT PAGE THEATER AUGUST 8

Al Jolson, who is called "The Master of Melancholy" and "Bouncer of the Blues," will be seen in the Winter Garden's twelve hour show squeezed into three. "Dancing Around," at the Page theatre, Friday, August 6th.

Al Jolson has been seen in five Winter Garden shows, but in only one of these, "The Honeymoon Express" has he been seen in the west. Mr. Jolson is unique as a comedian. He is, beyond doubt, the greatest singer of comic songs known to the stage of our time. Of the many songs he has popularized may be mentioned: "Get Out and Get Under," "I'm Glad My Wife's in Europe," "When Grown Up Ladies Act Like Babies," "You Made Me Love You" and "Tennessee, I Hear You Calling." Jolson has a way of blending impromptu with the lines which the author has given him, with the result that it is impossible to tell where he begins and the author leaves off. His ability to take advantage of, and produce laughter from, trifling incidents happening on the stage or in the audience is unprecedented.
