A Come-Back

A Boston clergyman was called west for two weeks and upon his return he asked his wife how his substitute filled the pulpit during his absence.

"Not well at all," she answered. "There was nothing in his sermon at all."

Later in the day the clergyman met the substitute and asked him how he got on.

"Oh, very well," he replied, "I didn't have time to prepare a sermon Sunday so I preached one of yours."

Farmer Jenks of Jason Corners is still talking about his visit to New York City last fall. The other night in Slocum's general store he said:

"Of course, I didn't visit the stock exchange cause the derned thing was closed up tight in them days."

"It does beat all," said a long-faced youth on the cracker box, "how that hoof and mouth disease spread."

Kiss Her

Why don't you kiss your wife each morning when you go to work?
Perhaps she does look frazzled and her face might scare a Turk.
But remember, man, she is the girl
you took for good or bad,
And you're not such a wonder when you show your mug, be-dad!

When wife is wan and tired, wise
hubby looks her o'er
And muses, "Gosh, she's getting old,
and looking pretty sore."
And then he spies a beauty young,
a-walking on the street—
He thinks she is the real kid-do and tries with her to meet.

Remember, man, Old Father Time has lined up your fact, too.
And if you'd use a looking glass you probably will view
A dried-up, grouchy appearing fizz,
red nose and bleary eye.
So when you leave the house for work just kiss the wife goodbye.

Untrue

A Kentucky editor was at death's door. The prominent physician of the town was bending over him thoughtfully. He tested the pulse.

"Circulation almost gone," he said sadly. Suddenly the editor rose up in bed.

"That's a lie," he said. "We have the biggest circulation in the county!"

THE KAISER'S TRIUMPH.

IMITATING the conquerors of antiquity, Kaiser Wilhelm is to have a triumphal entry into Warsaw, thus gratifying his primitive instincts of barbarism.

The triumph was an institution created to satisfy the vanity and blazon the prestige of successful blood-spillers of ancient Rome. The streets were adorned with garlands and streamers. The procession was headed by magistrates and officials, followed by trumpeters and then by spoils, which included not only the arms standards, statutes, etc., but also representations of battles, towns, rivers and mountains of conquered territory, models of fortresses, etc. Next came the victims destined for sacrifice. They were followed by prisoners, who were put to death when the capitol was reached.

The chariot carrying the victor was crowned with laurel and drawn by four horses, the general being attired as Jupiter in robes of purple and gold. In his right hand he held a laurel branch, in his left an ivory scepter surmounted by an eagle. Above his head the golden crown of Jupiter was held. Last came the soldiers shouting "Io triumphe" and singing laudatory songs. A great feast followed.

The last triumph recorded was that of Diocletian in A. D. 302, but that is no reason why the Kaiser, who has reincarnataed himself the successor of the Caesars, and seeks to resuscitate their ancient glories, should not also revive this impressive ceremony, and Warsaw offers his first great opportunity.

The streets of Warsaw should be paved for the occasion with the white skulls of the Slavs he has slain, while an effective color scheme could be worked out by having the gutters run with the newly spilt blood of his victims.

The scenic part of the procession should be headed by the brilliant conquest of Belgium and the slaughter of its civilian population, showing citizens shot down in squads, the ravishing of women and the maiming of children, concluding with the tableau of the burning of Louvain.

Following should come the devastation of France and the wanton massacre of its peasantry, preceeding the splendid destruction of the historic cathedral of Rheims.

The naval and aerial warfare would furnish many floats. The shelling of British seaside resorts, the dropping of bombs on farm houses, the torpedoing of fishing vessels, finishing by the chivalrous destruction of the Lusitania, with its thousand innocent victims perishing in the sea. This latter could be made particularly effective on account of the drowning children.

The use of asphyxiating bombs should be fully illustrated, with the suffering and dying victims of the poisonous gases breathing their last as the procession moves on.

The Kaiser, of course, could not consent, as emperor of the world, to represent a heathen deity. Alexander the Great claimed an immaculate conception of the god Ammon as responsible for his genius. Augustus set up statues to himself as a god, but in his incandescent brilliance, the Kaiser can consistently represent no less a person than the Almighty himself whom he has taken into partnership. Only the Kaiser could design garb fit for the occasion—the realization of his dreams of spoilation.

Following the conquering army should come several millions of the maimed and crippled and those of his prisoners he has not enslaved to do the druggery of his empire.

Altogether it would be a most impressive spectacle—this triumph of the modern Ceasar, uniting the forgotten lustre of the past with the crimsoned present, a fitting tribute to the beneficent reign of the super-king and the success of the "chosen people" in bringing to Europe the "higher civilization," and restoring to the twentieth century after Christ the lost glory of the twentieth century before Christ.

NEW REVOLUTION IN WEST HAITI

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A new revolutionary disturbance at Gonaives, on the western coast of Haiti, has been reported to Rear Admiral Caperton and he has disptached the naval tug Osceola with forces to protect the customs house.

The admiral reported today the occupation of Fort Nationale in Port au Prince by American forces without resistance. The American marines are quartered in the barracks.

BERLIN QUIET ON FALL OF WARSAW

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 6.—The Berlin morning newspapers today publish no additional details whatever concerning the fighting which preceded the fall of the Russian fortresses of Warsaw and Ivangorod.

Warsaw's fall had been discounted in advance and the news evoked no demonstrations in the capital.

The morning newspapers comment on the news rejoicingly, but on the whole more soberly. The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"This unfortunately is not the end of the conflict, but it is a new promise that our cause marches on."

CALKINS TO DECIDE FISHERMEN'S WAR AT ROGUE'S MOUTH

Judge F. M. Calkins of Jackson county will preside at the hearing of the contempt cases brought by the Macleay estate against the fishermen employed by the Seaborg cannery who are accused of trespass upon the Macleay property and of such illegal acts as attempting to burn the Wedderburn cannery and destroy nets with acid, when the circuit court meets at Gold Beach August 24. The fishermens war will be threashed out before the Jackson county magistrate instead of Judge Coke.

Governor Withycombe has appointed Col. B. K. Lawson, formerly warden of the penitentiary, to act as special agent for the state on Rogue river, to preserve the peace and end the reign of lawlessness.

Eighty-three of the fishermen were enjoined in the circuit court from trespassing on the Wedderburn company's property, and a few days ago Judge Coke was petitioned to cite nine of these men to show cause why they should not be arrested for contempt of court in violating the injunction.

The case came up yesterday at Coquille and Judge Coke put the whole matter over until August 24, when the circuit court at Gold Beach, county seat of Curry county, will convene.

There is a big run of fish reported at the mouth of the Rogue river now. It is stated that one of the canneries received 800 fish Monday and one got 600 Chinooks Tuesday. The price of fish has been raised by the canneries. The Seaborg cannery is now paying 75 cents for each fish and the Macleay cannery is paying a sliding scale of $1.25 for the big fish, $1 for the next size and 65 cents for the smaller ones. The result is, it is reported, that the Seaborg fishermen are trading their big fish to the Macleay fishermen who turn them in for $1.25. Seaborg's fishermen take in return the small ones which would bring only 65 cents at the Macleay cannery and selling them to the Seaborg cannery for 75 cents.

The change of venue from Coos to Curry county was granted by Judge Coke in response to a petition signed by a large number of Curry county men, asking Judge Coke to hold the hearings in the cases at Gold Beach instead of Coquille. It it set forth in the petition that it is about 1.0 miles to Coquille and that the loss of time and the cost of the trip here will seriously inconvenience the defendants and their witnesses. All of the Curry county officials except one had signed the petition in addition to the fishermen.

Plans are on foot to establish a paper mill at Albany.

Whether you have or not you will enjoy a visit to the plant of the more than ever. The most interesting feature of the process is pasteurizing the cream by strictly Sanitary Methods. The cream, after being separated from the milk, is tested for butter-fat by strictly scientific apparatus, and is then placed in the Pasteurizer, which is a great aluminum tank containing revolving aluminum coils.

After the cream has been placed in the Pasteurizer, which has previously been sterilized, live steam is turned into the coils, which revolves, thoroughly agitating the cream, until a temperature is attained to ripen the cream before churning. The steam is then turned off, and refrigerating brine turned into the coils, reducing the cream to the exact temperature required for churning. This assures longer keeping qualities and still further adds to the wholesomeness and uniformity of the product.
IT IS A PROCESS which undoubtedly will be required by the PURE FOOD LAWS in this country eventually, as it is now in many parts of Europe where dairying is the chief industry.
After churning the butter is placed in Cold Storage and each package is weighed separately, wrapped, and placed in cold rooms until needed. The cold storage facilities of this plant cannot be excelled, as it has the entire WEINHARD'S Ice Plant at its disposal.
