OPEN OFFICES TO LAUNCH CAMPAIGN FOR BEET ACREAGE

Samples of sugar beets grown in the Rogue river valley were collected by E. S. Bramwell, representative of the Western Sugar company, who contemplate the construction of a $4000,000 beet sugar factory in the valley were sent to Portland last night for seacharine tests. Mr. Bramwell left last night for Portland. He said the beets were in a high state of development, and that the tests if they came up to his expectations would result in the sending of more sugar beet experts to this section for final inspection.

According to tests made five weeks ago, Mr. Bramwell said, Rogue river beets run as high as 17 per cent seacharine. This is better than the prize sugar beets of Idaho and Utah.

Mr. Bramwell will return to Medford next week, and open offices in this city, and a campaign will be launched for sugar beet acreage, along systematic lines.

One of the half grown beets collected yesterday weighed 10 pounds, with five pounds additional for top.
