

SOUTHERN OREGON LAKES DECLARED GREATEST ASSETS

(Portland Journal.) Oregon does not realize what surpassing scenic resources it has in the lakes of southern Oregon, in the opinion of Gilbert H. Grosvenor of Washington, D. C., editor of the National Geographical Magazine, who spent Sunday in Portland.

Mr. Grosvenor declares that Klamath lake is one of the most wonderful sheets of water he ever saw. He has traveled all over the world gathering material for articles on subjects relating to the earth we live on, what it contains and where it is to be found.

National Parks Visited

He is now making a tour of the national parks of America, and left yesterday for Glacier national park. He saw Crater lake for the first time on this trip, and found there a spectacle of grandeur and sublimity that cannot be equaled anywhere on the globe. He was shown the park by Superintendent Will G. Steel and Major Clum, and in an informal description of his experiences there declared that people of remote states are coming to know and appreciate the lake more even than the people who live close at hand.

Klamath lake he described as being similar to the famous Scottish lakes, and is in a similar setting of barren land. Save for the difference in climate, he said, one could find a striking analogy. What appealed to Mr. Grosvenor particularly was the wild bird life on the lake. Thousands upon thousands of great white pelicans, blue herons, ducks and smaller birds were swarming over the water, protected as they are by federal and state laws.

Many Birds Seen

On one log raft in the lake he said he saw what appeared to be thousands of these birds, a sight he would never forget.

Mr. Grosvenor is preparing a series of articles for his magazine on the national parks. While he was in Portland he spent a whole forenoon at the shop of a scenic photographer, who has pictures of all the views he had recently looked upon. When he left he had $100 worth of pictures of Crater and Klamath lakes, which he plans to reproduce in his magazine.

DARING FEAT PROVES STRENGTH U. S. TIRES

A rather novel and daring feat to prove the strength and durability of the United States Tire company inner tubes, was pulled off in New York recently when one of the members of the advertising crew was lowered from the sixth floor of the First National Bank building with his entire weight held up by one of the inner tubes made by this company.

A rope was rigged on a pulley out one of the front windows, and to this rope was fastened the rubber tube, after the operator had securely belted it around his waist. When he swung out clear from all support his entire weight was held by the rubber tubing, which easily held him until he could be lowered to the ground.

NANCE O'NEIL IN "PRINCESS ROMANOFF" AT THE PAGE WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

Nance O'Neil in "Princess Romanoff," is the attraction at the Page this week Wednesday and Thursday. Few dramas have ever received the world-wide fame extended universally to Sardon's most famous play which has been enacted by almost every great actress who has ever played and is regarded as the most exciting emotional role ever written. As pictured for the Fox photoplay, that eminent exponent of stormy emotion Nance O'Neil, who was featured in the production of Kreutzer Sonata, "Princess Romanoff" based on Fedora, rises to superb dramatic heights impossible to attain within the limitations of even the most modern stage. Certainly no more absorbing or intense screen drama has ever been filmed nor has any greater actress than Nance O'Neil ever appeared in the famous role of the Russian princess. The Hearst-Selig Weekly is another feature of this program.

GERMANS FAIL TO LAND TROOPS VICINITY OF PERNAU

PETROGRAD, Aug. 25.—A vivid story of the German effort to land troops in Pernau, in the northeast corner of the Gulf of Riga, is told by a Russian official from Pernau who has reached here.

"At 6:00 o'clock on the evening of the 18th, while the elite of the 50,000 people of the city were assembled in the naval park listening to a band concert" the official relates. A policeman ordered them to disperse. It was then noticed that a German ship far away to the horizon. She remained for some time making observations. It appeared later that the Russians had signalled the ship to halt, not knowing her nationality, and that signals questioning the vessel as to this point remained unanswered.

"The people did not become alarmed until cannonading was heard at sea and that German ships became visible. Three of them seemed to be light cruisers and four were large transports.

"Soon the batteries on shore opened fire on the German squadron. The German ships replied and the continuous roar of the guns on both sides coalesced into a mighty chaos of sound.

"The German ships were three miles away, being unable to reach nearer on account of the shallow water. Their fire was inaccurate. Nobody in Pernau was killed, but a few persons in Orstais lost their lives. The railway lines were slightly damaged but were quickly repaired.

"The Germans fired uninterruptedly from 11 o'clock in the evening until 3 o'clock the next morning."

Monday night and pronounced it a "decided success."
