What Good Service Means to the Tourist

In the majority of cases time is an important asset to every motor tourist. He plans a trip and counts on having so much time here, so much there. If he is held up it means a change in schedule and maybe some sights omitted.
To make it easier for tourists, as far as storage batteries are concerned, the Willard Storage Battery Company have issued a list of more than 400 Service Stations where expert attention to charging and repairs may be had.
A person may be driving any one of the 141 makes of cars equipped with Willard batteries. Suppose his generator is charging too much or too little. Or perhaps he needs some distilled water for the battery. No matter what route he traverses he will find a Willard Service Station within easy driving distance.
By referring to the list you will see the station for Southern Oregon is the
