FIVE MILLION HUNTERS PURSUE OUR GAME BIRDS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—With the beginning of the hunting season, the variety and plenty of the North American hunter's domain is indicated in a communication to the National Geographic Society from Henry W. Henshaw, chief of the United States Biological Survey, which tells of "American Game Birds." Mr. Henshaw enumerates more than 100 kinds of game birds common to this country's preserves, among which are 37 kinds of duck, eight kinds of goose, eight kinds of quail, and five kinds of grouse. While America's preserves are distinguished among the hunting fields of the world for their wealth of game, the writer shows that they are hunted with dangerous thoroughness. He says:

"America has always been a paradise for sportsmen, but of late years the number of those whose chief relaxation is the pursuit of game, has greatly increased, and today there are probably not far from five millions who are interested in the pursuit of game! What this army of five million hunters means to the large and small game of America can better be imagined than described! Modern guns and ammunition are of the very best, and they are sold at prices so low as to be within the reach of all. Added to these very efficient weapons for killing small game, are innumerable devices for killing waterfowl, as snail-bats, punt-guns, swivel guns, sail boats, steam launches, night floating, night lighting, and others."

The varieties of American game duck given by Mr. Henshaw are baldpate, barrow's golden-eye, black, buff-necked, king, Pacific, spectacled and Steller's eider, fulvous tree duck, mallard, merganser, red head, pintail, scaup, scoter, canvas back, shoveler, and teal. Of canvas back he says:

"Canvas Back duck.

"The canvas back, perhaps the most famous of American waterfowl, has purchased its fame at parlee. So highly prized is it by the epicure that today he who can afford to dine on canvas back sets the mark of luxurious living. Not that the canvas back differs essentially from other ducks, but its exceptional flavor is due to the fact that its favorite food is wild celery, a long ribbon-like grass which grows in shallow ponds and estuaries. As the plant roots several feet under the surface, only the diving ducks can secure it and the plibben kinds have to be content with such floating fragments as they can pick up or can steal from their more aristocratic relatives. In Oregon and Washington the canvas back lives much upon wasato, a bulb-like root formerly a staple article of food among many Indian tribes, and their exceptional flavor is said to be little, if any, inferior to that of the celery fed canvasback of the east. Prized alike by sportsmen and by epicure the ranks of the canvasback have been depleted by the relentless pursuit to which it has been subjected. However, the greater number of these ducks breed far to the northward where the year is safe, and under present laws their number should increase to something like their former abundance."

Despite this country's present vast wealth in game birds, according to the writer, they would soon be shot away but for proper protection. As it is, he continues, the number of game birds today are quite insignificant when compared to the abundance of former days. Destruction of former breeding places by drainage and, more especially, the relentless pursuit with firearms, are the causes assigned for the falling off of supply.

Mr. Henshaw writes:

Early Abundance

"The statements of the early chroniclers regarding the multitudes of duck, plover, and wild geese almost defy belief. When, at the records of the first part of the last century, one reads of flocks of pigeons that required three days to pass a given point in a continuous moving stream, and again of flocks estimated to contain more than two billion birds, credulity is taxed to the limit. Yet not only one such flock was observed, but they were of periodic occurrence during many years of our early history, and the accounts of them are too well attested to be doubted. As throwing a curious sidelight on the abundance of wild fowl and the hardships to which the slaves of the period were subjected, I quote from Girnel, who states that 'in early days slave owners, who hired out their slaves, stipulated that canvas back ducks should not be fed to them more than twice each week!'"

A high money value is placed on our game resources. Mr. Henshaw states that Oregon values her game resources, consisting largely of game birds, at $5,000,000 a year, while California and Maine each claim their game to be worth $20,000,000 a year, which suggests the enormous aggregate value of the country's game. Mr. Henshaw concludes his communication with the expression of the belief that the government and the people of the country should do all in their power to protect and to bring about a rightful use of this rich heritage.

PIONEERS REUNION THURSDAY SEPT. 16

ASHLAND, Sept. 9.—The thirtieth annual reunion of the Jackson County Pioneer association will be held here on Thursday, September 16. Musical and literary exercises will occur at the Vining theater. The banquet event takes place at the Elks temple, for which ample preparation is being made, a committee of resident ladies having the matter in charge, including Mesdames Ella Garratt, Kate Grainger, Ina Dodge, Mabel Kinney, Annie Walker, Elizabeth Van Sant, Ella True and Elsie Christensen. The literary program is in the hands of Professor Irving Vining.

Among the early pioneers who have passed away since the last annual reunion at Jacksonville last year are R. V. Deall of Central Point, C. C. Beckman of Jacksonville, Albert G. Rockefeller and Mrs. Elizabeth Thornton of Ashland, whose husband survives her, nearly 90 years of age. Mrs. Thornton's maiden name was Elizabeth Patterson, and she was a sister of Joshua Patterson of Phoenix and Sylvester Patterson of this city. A committee on necrology will submit appropriate resolutions of respect to the memory of these pioneers.

Indications point to a large attendance at the forthcoming reunion. Fred D. Wagner is president of the association and Charles H. Gillette secretary, both of this city.

If You Examine A Flake Of the New Post Toasties

You can see little white "puffs" on each flake—a distinguishing characteristic of this new food.

An entirely new method of making these New Toasties brings out all the delightful corn flavor, and gives them a body and firmness—that don't mush down in cream or milk—

But let the taste tell. Eat some dry, just as they come from the package, compare their delicious taste with that of any "corn flakes" you have eaten and you can understand why New Post Toasties are called

Superior Corn Flakes

Your grocer has them now.

LARGE AUDIENCE ENJOYS THEDA BARA

A very large and interested audience enjoyed the fascinating production of "The Devil's Daughter" at the Page last evening. Theda Bara, well known as the woman with "the most wickedly beautiful face in the world" gives a remarkable portrayal of the title role. Her work in this feature even surpasses that of her former portrayal of the title role. Her work in this feature even surpasses that of her former successes "A Fool There Was," in which Miss Bara attained world fame. "The Devil's Daughter" will be shown for the last time this evening at the Page.
