We Eat Oatmeal

Because It is an Admirable Breakfast Food

But oatmeal must be properly cooked, which takes time; because oats are largely starch, and the starch cells must be broken down by cooking before the digestive organs can take up the nourishment.

One enterprising concern found out a long while ago that few housewives went to the trouble of cooking oatmeal properly, and decided to cook it for them. We refer to the H-O company, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Comparatively few people know that H-O is the ONLY Oatmeal that is cooked in the mill; the only STEAM-COOKED Oatmeal on the market.

After the carefully selected oats are hulled they are placed in sealed "cookers" and cooked by live steam for more than two hours, in a temperature much higher than can be obtained at home.

This cooking makes H-O Oatmeal easy to prepare properly, and saves your time and fuel. All of the true flavor of oats is retained by this kind of cooking. H-O Oatmeal sells at fifteen cents for a large package. On the shelves of good grocers.
