G. Alder, of this valley, left a specimen of milo maize at the Commercial club the other day that suggests its almost perfect adaptability to our soil and climate. It is an excellent growth, full, well matured and of good "heft." It resembles a cross between Egyptian corn and fetereta. The latter has the advantage in that it requires a shorter season by thirty days for maturing. It is but little known in this valley, however; but milo maize has been grown considerably here. Both fetereta and milo maize are excellent stock and poultry feed.

J. H. Jolly, of Union county, a sugar beet raiser of extended experience, arrived in Medford yesterday to look over the situation in this valley with a view to locating here, if conditions please him. "One of your greatest assets in this valley," said Mr. Jolly to a Mail Tribune man, "is your excellent climate. The quality and apparent durability of your soil, under proper treatment, is another great asset, but these two special features of the Rogue river valley will not suffice to bring you prosperity they forestall until you shall have supplemented them with irrigation systems that will cover the entire valley. I will remain some days 'taking notes,'" Mr. Jolly concluded.

Buy Medford made candy at the Shasta.

With eggs selling at 45 to 50 cents a dozen in this valley, it would seem that farmers would need no further incentive to increase their flocks and the efficiency of their hens in the matter of egg production. It can be done so inexpensively and the profit thereon is so inviting, it would appear to be an easy way to augment the pin-money sources of the ranches, at least.

Mrs. Leach, Abdo-Support and Barely surgical corset, at 326 N. Bartlett.

Turkey dealers are now looking up the sources of supply for the Thanksgiving demand. So far, the conclusion is that the demand will exceed the local supply. There is large profit on turkeys where the farmer has the range for them and produces the other necessary feed.

The interest is increasing in the contests at the Box Ball Alleys. They are offering a box of cigars to the gentleman and a box of chocolate candies to the lady making the highest score this week.

The proposed poultry show is eliciting a deal of interest among those who have poultry to exhibit, as well also as those who are anxious to learn the simple secret of improving their flocks.

Butternut bread at De Voe's.

Now is the beginning of the season in which it is wise to prepare for the production of spring broilers on the farm. There is a greedy market for them at 25 cents a pound, usually. The demand will begin to be insistent in April for broilers of one to one and a half pounds.
