

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The study of Jesus with his mother Mary, in the stable place of his birth, in the presence of anxious visitors who had followed the Star of Bethlehem and stood in reverent silence before the Christ-child, is shown in an illustration 12x25 feet in size on the billboards of the Klam Advertising company at various places in this city, the space being donated by the company and the picture by those who desire to cherish the memory of that sacred event. Beneath the picture, which is an artistic bit of printing in many colors, are the words: "And when they were come to the house they saw the young child with Mary, his mother, and fell down and worshipped him."—Matt. II, xi. People of the city who have stopped to enjoy the picture owe the pleasure found in the scene to B. Klum.

A regular session of the city council will be held tomorrow night. This meeting will mark the limit of the time during which the much discussed question of a larger and more modern city hall can be taken up and decided in time for the January election. Whether or not the matter will be revived is not known today; but the former pledge of the council is being discussed on the streets. The test case in the collection of paving assessments by process of law will probably not be ready to present for final consideration by the council tonight. It is a somewhat large problem and must be handled with great care, inasmuch as the case will reach the supreme court of the state for final adjudication.

Boys who are wrongfully permitted to handle guns within the city limits have been doing some very reckless shooting recently. On Portland avenue they shot through a resident's window the other day. Luckily the missile missed the inmates of the house. Complaint was made to Juvenile Officer Gay, who is now on the trail of the thoughtless scouts. Parents should assist the authorities in preventing their boys from engaging in such dangerous pastime. Too frequently there is tragedy in that sort of carelessness.

That Oregon white fir is an exceptionally fine wood in texture and fiber is again demonstrated in its successful use for violin tops. J. M. Winter, who resides on Ross Lane, is a violin maker of skill. Many were inclined to discredit his statement concerning the value of white fir, which grows abundantly in this valley, for use in such delicate work. He has just received an order for two feet of it, board measure, for which the applicant paid in advance $5. At that rate, white fir, used for that purpose, is worth $1500 a thousand feet. "Is it worth while to save the white fir?" Mr. Winter asks.
