Polger, who has been absent from this city for two months, purpose of maintaining an ice surduring which time he traveled over the east, coming home by the south- winter. ern route, arrived Thursday evening. He encountered much cold weather and a good deal of storm, even in Texas. Mr. Folger tarried a day or two in El Paso, going over the river into Juarez, Mexico, for a brief visit, but he found nothing there to suggest that he prolong his stay on that side of the line. He was there on the night before the massacre of eighteen Americans near Chihuahua. "Americans ought to keep out of Mexico during the reign of guerilla batchery down there," said Mr. Folger. "it is like inviting sure destruction to go among those savage, war-crazed white, which meant snow or occaspeople now."
