Mills, a former Washington county farmer now doing orchard work in this vicinity. Mr. Marsh says, while they have an abundant rainfall in his section of the Willamette valley during the winter months, those farmers who use irrigation during July and August are the farmers who make the clear profit. He has employed irrigation for four years on a rented place there and states that the increased yield was so great that the owner of the land raised the rent on him. So, he will try to find a tract of land in this valley which he can irrigate for himself. Mr. Marsh, formerly of the Yakima country, declares that he wouldn't farm anywhere in Oregon without irrigation and drainage.

John E. Campbell of Bloomington, Ill., who has been visiting in many sections of the Pacific coast during the past three months, arrived in this city yesterday evening for an indefinite stay. He has heard much of the fruitous Rogue river valley, he says, and he could not safely return east without a personal knowledge of some of its attractions. "I observe that you are only beginning substantial development here. That is, you are just beginning to confess the necessity of establishing permanent irrigation systems over the valley. That will be found to be the real beginning of your permanent development. I have interests in California and am slightly interested in Idaho. In neither of those places did I begin to realize reasonable interest on the investment until we got irrigation water. We are now all making money. It encouraged the application of modern methods on the farm and in the orchard. Diversified farming also is being extended in acreage. Those communities are all prosperous now."

TO BLOCK CONFIRMATION

many courts do not view modern economic problems in a contemporaneous way; that they are benighted and uninformed as to industrial conditions; and that constitutions are made to serve and not to bind a people. To 90 per cent of the people this attitude is one of the strongest reasons why Brandeis ought to go on the court.

The second charge amounts to this: That Brandeis is honest. Finding that the shoe machinery trust was a menace to the public, he resigned as its counsel and afterwards did not hesitate to denounce its monopolistic practices.

The charge that he lost the case against increased freight rates rests on a personal feud between Brandeis and Clifford Thorne. Brandeis disagreed with Thorne in the last rate case and agreed that the railroads needed more revenue, but he said they ought to get it in some other way than by taxing the people in addition at rates. This is an insincere charge.

Echo of Ballinger Case

The fourth charge is instigated by Senator Knute Nelson, who was chairman of the joint committee which investigated the Ballinger matter. Nelson early demonstrated his bias in favor of Ballinger. The great offending of which Brandeis is guilty in Nelson's eyes was the exposure of the fact that President Taft had not told the truth when he said that he (Taft) had personally considered and passed upon all the evidence and had himself written the letter of exoneration of Secretary Ballinger.

From the standpoint of the public, however, Brandeis' action in the Ballinger case, which resulted in saving the coal fields of Alaska to the public, is an added reason for his confirmation.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK, THICK, GLOSSY

Look years younger! Try Grandma's recipe of Sage and Sulphur and nobody will know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.
