EXIT MR. GARRISON

THERE will be little regret over the resignation of Lindley M. Garrison as secretary of war. Whenever a cabinet official becomes so enamored of his individual ideas as to insist upon their adoption to the sacrifice of all else by the administration he serves, it is time for him to leave.

Mr. Garrison belonged to the reactionaries. He never was a progressive or in sympathy with progressive democracy. His training as a corporation attorney naturally biased his viewpoint. His pet scheme was a large standing army and the "continental army" of reserves, as favored by the veterinary surgeon now labeled ranking major general by grace of T. R.

A standing army is not a democratic institution. It withdraws from useful occupation at public expense a proportion of the population which are unfitted after discharge for other vocation. It is only needed for international police duty. It is inconsistent with our most cherished ideals to turn America into a military camp.

Mr. Garrison opposed the national guard, yet the national guard familiarizes our youth with the use of arms and the theory of war, with the rudiments of drill and maneuvers and sanitation of camps. It induces young men to undergo, at such times as they can, needed physical training, and its strengthening is far more to be desired than the creation of a large body of paid soldiery.

It was to be expected that the champion of militarism would also advocate the policy of the United States continuing to play the role of a feudal lord in the Philippines and oppose the recognition of the God-given right of the Filipino to govern himself in his own country as best he can—the fulfillment of a promise the American people gave to the Filipino when our army planted the flag upon his territory without extending the protection of the constitution.

The champions of militarism are also the champions of exploitation of foreign people, as well as our own, through armed might—that is what they want big armies and navies for, and the rank and file of true democracy, under all partisan labels, will regard the loss of Mr. Garrison as good riddance.

THE GARY PLAN

THE Gary plan of education, now in full operation at Gary, Ind., and in partial operation at New York City, provides for the use of existing school buildings by two or more sets of pupils. It utilizes the school plant during the hours now idle and thus lessens the expense of housing school children.

The Gary system, in brief, substitutes departmental teaching for all children, from the first year through the eighth, as now practiced in high schools and universities, for the present policy of a seat for each child with one teacher for all subjects. It also provides instruction of groups of children by pupils instead of teachers, the grouping together of younger and older pupils for auditorium, laboratory and workshop exercise; the substitution of an auditorium period for classroom instruction, and substitutes for formal physical training, supervised play with four teachers for twelve classes.

The meritorious features claimed for the system are thus summarized by the United States bureau of education:

- 1. An enriched school life for every pupil. 2. A co-ordination of all existing child welfare agencies and a fuller utilization of all facilities in present recreational and educational institutions. 3. A solution of the part-time problem. 4. A double school plan by which each school seat serves two children. 5. A wider use of the school plant. 6. An increase in the school day through co-ordination of work, study and play activities. 7. A program that would invest the child's non-academic time to greater profit and pleasure. 8. A socialized education in harmony with progressive thought of the day.

The advantages of the system to densely populated districts is apparent. Whether or not the system is universally adopted depends upon the results attained of the present experiments.

NERVOUS--NO APPETITE

Hartford Woman Tells How She Regained Strength. Hartford, Conn. "I was run-down, nervous, no appetite, could not sleep, and had no strength, an old lady told me how much Vinol had helped her when in a like condition. I tried it and noticed an improvement within a week. It soon built up my strength, my nervousness disappeared and I can sleep well. I have never found any remedy equal to Vinol to create strength." Mrs. Clara Burr.

It's the tonic iron, the medicinal extractives of fresh cod's liver with out oil, and beef peptone contained in Vinol, that makes it so successful in enriching the blood and creating strength for run-down, nervous, overworked women.

Manager W. A. Sommer of the Modoc orchards, while in San Francisco recently, purchased a pumping plant soon to be installed on the high levels of that big orchard property for the purpose of irrigating thirty-nine acres devoted largely to pears. In addition to the pears, there are only a family orchard and garden, together with a great variety of grapes, including many eastern kinds. These grape varieties will ultimately be reduced in number to those which make the best showing in quality and yield.

HONG KONG KOLUM

Some of the women who never pass a mirror without looking at their reflection show bravely unsurpassed on any battlefield.

The Sade Tale of the Beautiful Mermaid

The most fashionable mermaid on the Atlantic coast sat on a piece of coral and wept salty tears.

"Now, now, my pretty one!" exclaimed Neptune, "why should you grieve?"

"When the land women took up the chin chin, I wore one too," wailed the beautiful mermaid. "When the land women started the dancing craze, I one-stepped on the waves as gracefully as any of them. H-b-b-but n-n-now," she sobbed, gazing wistfully at an approaching iceberg and casting a rueful glance at her finny extremity, "How, oh how, can I ever taken up the skating tad?"

Wifely Suspicions

"Don't use any of that powder on my face" said the customer after he had been shaved.

"Why not?" asked the barber, "anything the matter with it?"

"There's just this the matter with it: Last time I was shaved here I got some of the stuff on my coat and I've been kept busy trying to explain it to my wife ever since."

Lunch and Literature

The large and husky Mr. Mooze had recently been deprived of several internal organs by the surgeons, and was recovering so rapidly that he began to dream of hashed browned potatoes, T-bone steaks smothered in onions, custard pie and other delicacies. The hospital diet of warm milk was beginning to make him peevish.

Finally the nurse gladdened his soul by the announcement that today he was to have "some food."

But the "food" consisted of a few spoonful of gruel.

"Huh!" remarked Mr. Mooze after he had gulped the disappointing "meal," "now you might bring me a postage stamp, nurse."

"What for?" asked the nurse.

"Oh, I think I'll do some reading!"

Today's Bellringer

Two physicians were called in consultation one morning. Dr. Bridgman was one of them. A few days later he was speaking of the occurrence.

"I saw immediately," he said, "that Dr. Brinckley's diagnosis was wrong; but as he was in charge of the case, of course it wouldn't do for me to interfere."

"Did the patient die?" asked his friend.

"Oh, yes, certainly," replied Dr. Bridgman. "She died of professional courtesy—a very common and fatal disease."

The Misplaced "K."

The real estate dealer had just opened a new "suburban addition." He had engaged a sign painter to paint a huge sign which had been erected where all who passed could read. Sunday afternoon he thought he'd go out himself and take a look at the sign.

He saw a sign which at first filled him with joy. A large crowd had gathered about the sign and he saw visions of money sales and cash prizes. One thing, however, puzzled him. All the people were laughing.

He drew closer and then all his hopes were dashed as he read the freshly painted legend:
