

TUNGSTEN ORE VEINS DISCOVERED NEAR GOLD HILL

GOLD HILL, Ore., March 20.—H. A. Ray and George Haff, local prospectors, who have resided here for many years, have uncovered an important and remarkable body of Scheelite tungsten ore, of high grade quality. This is the first discovery of its kind in Oregon, although it is said the float has been found in different districts of this state. They have two parallel veins being about 70 feet apart. One running from 10 to 12 inches in width, the other averaging about 6 inches, having uncovered four chutes for a distance of 600 feet.

Assays from the ores have been made by F. M. Parks, state director of mines, showing a value of 54 percent tungsten acid, and 36 percent scheelite. The Southern Oregon Mining bureau gave 36 percent tungsten acid and 48 percent scheelite. The Premos Chemical company give an average of 54 scheelite, and the panings carrying 70 percent tungsten acid. While some of their samples run 60 percent, the average would be better than 50 percent, the value of the quotation at the present time is $85 a unit for 60 percent ore, which would be $4.25 per pound. As they have several tons on the dump, the prospectors are assured a fortune in sight.

The discovery was made three miles north of Gold Hill, on the property formerly known and operated as the Sylvanite Mining company, and was made while prospecting for gold. The locators have secured options on all the surrounding property, the purchase price will cost them some $40,000. But it is known that these properties carry a large vein of gold bearing ores, upon which several thousands of dollars have been spent for development work.

During the so-called "hard times" spell, these prospectors have been incessantly in the field searching for rare metals. They have in addition to this discovery uncovered a large body of high-grade manganese, which it is predicted will bring big prominence to this district.

VALUABLE OILS AND MEALS FROM PITS OF CHERRIES

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Sixteen hundred tons of cherry pits, now a source of annoyance and expense to canneries, can be made to yield two valuable oils and also a meal for feeding cattle, according to specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture. In addition 105,000 gallons of cherry juice now wasted in seedling cherries can be turned into desirable jelly and sirup, or even into alcohol. A saving of these valuable by-products from cherry canning may make possible the domestic manufacture of substitutes for almond oil and bitter almond oil, now imported, and at the same time establish a new industry in the cherry packing districts of the North Atlantic, North Central and Western States.

The specialists, however, have not yet carried their work to a point where they can say that the converting of this juice and the cherry pits would be a profitable side industry for the ordinary or smaller cannery. In cases where a number of canners are operating within a reasonable distance of one another, the specialists, however, believe that the waste products could be sent to a central co-operative or other plant at small cost and there utilized to advantage. Studies, however, are being carried on to determine whether means can not be devised for making these waste products profitable also when handled on a small scale.

Some time ago there was similar investigation of the use of peach and apricot pits for making oil and meal, and a commercial enterprise has been established in California for dealing with these products. The Department has published a bulletin on this subject and also one dealing with the utilization of raisin seed from the seeded raisin industry. It was found that many tons of raisin seed had considerable fruit adhering to them which could readily be turned into a very desirable raisin sirup for the use of confectioners and others. After this pulp had been used it was found that an oil useful in the arts could profitably be pressed from the seed, and experiments are under way to determine whether the crushed seed could not be used to advantage in feeding stock.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter today than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action!

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood; it benefits lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes.
