

MANY SPORTSMEN COMING TO OREGON TO TRY ANGLING

PORTLAND, March 27.—William L. Finley, Oregon state biologist, who has been lecturing and exhibiting slides of Oregon game in connection with a trip east, has received an offer to take up educational work in the east at a salary of $4000 a year. This information was received in Portland yesterday in a letter which Mr. Finley had written from New York City. Mr. Finley said that the offer contemplated his taking up lecturing and field work.

"The idea as it has been put up to me is to follow along the same lines as we have been taking up in the state of Oregon," he said, "treating wild life preservation as an educational and economic problem rather than a legal problem."

Mr. Finley did not say whether he was seriously considering the offer.

Views Attract Anglers
Mr. Finley in his letter says that the pictures are attracting wide attention. Among those shown are moving pictures of angling in Oregon streams and the methods of the Oregon fish and game commission in keeping the streams stocked. There are also some views of the state game farm and pictures of outdoor life in Oregon.

"It just happened that I was showing these moving pictures of angling in Oregon the other day to a lot of sportsmen," Mr. Finley writes. "Three of these fellows, who have angled in most all of the famous streams in this part of the country and who have plenty of money to travel on, told me that they were thinking strongly of going to Oregon next summer to try Rogue river. When they saw the pictures I have of Kelly and Putnam wading the Rogue up to their necks and fighting to land some of these game steelheads—they yelled like youngsters and decided forthwith to go to Oregon next summer."

Many Sportsmen Coming

"I meet a good many sportsmen in different sections who are planning to go out to Oregon and try fishing in the Rogue river, the Maekenzie and the Deschutes. These streams are becoming widely known throughout the east, and also the Willamette river for salmon fishing at Oregon City."

Mr. Finley has been receiving many favorable press notices on his lectures in the east. Among the papers commenting on his lectures are the Washington Evening Star and the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press and Times.

At Minneapolis, Mr. Finley lectured at the University of Minnesota to a large crowd of children, and later to a meeting of the Minnesota Game Protective league. He also lectured before the National Geographic society at Washington and at a meeting of the Fish and Game League at Burlington, Vt.

CEMENT PLANT ACTIVELY PREPARES FOR OPERATIONS

Manager J. C. Burch of the Beaver Portland Cement company of Gold Hill, who transacted business in this city during the greater part of last week, predicts an active season for his company during the present year. This activity will consist, for some months in its preparation for a large output of cement and limestone flour. A complete plant is now in process of construction. A new limestone quarry is being opened and a railroad spur is being built to it.

The purest limestone found on the Pacific coast is that mined in Jackson and Josephine counties. Its great abundance in this region is beyond computation in commercial tons. The Gold Hill plant has already been grinding limestone into flour for use on soils in which limestone content is deficient. The first sales found for this product were made in the Willamette valley counties, where thousands of tons of it can be most profitably used every season. This feature of the company's output promises to become popular at once wherever the true value of limestone on acidulated soils is recognized. Use of the limestone flour will enlarge this recognition very rapidly, for its benefits are quickly discernible.

A tentative contract has been entered into with the California-Oregon Power company for power with which to operate this plant. It will carry a large payroll, for it will employ a large number of men in its several departments. The Beaver Portland Cement company is one of the institutions that will help to build up the commercial interests of southern Oregon very substantially. It will be a permanent development in a field of inexhaustible resources, so far as raw material is concerned.

MEDFORD COLLEGE NOTES

Two new members of the Order of Gregg Artists are Joan Anderson and Louise Williamson, who received their certificates this week. Shorthand specimens from several other students have just been submitted to the examiner in New York, and certificates are confidently looked for in the near future.

A special class was formed this week for the purpose of preparing its members to take the civil service examination which will be held at Grants Pass in May. The students are taking hold of the work with much enthusiasm, and with a determination to win out.

The coming week will be examination week for the class in business correspondence. The class has been doing unusually good work, which is the result of interest and enthusiasm combined with hard work. This combination always gets the best results.

Joan Anderson is now numbered among our successful graduates. She completed the office practice course with credit and is now busily at work

Louise Williamson has also successfully completed the office practice course, and is now prepared to do stenographic work, legal and otherwise.

A rough draft test was held Friday, which was participated in by those who are preparing to take the civil service examination. Very good results were obtained on the preliminary test.

A TWICE-TOLD TALE

One of Interest to Our Readers
Good news bears repeating, and when it is confirmed after a long lapse of time, even if we hesitated to believe it at first hearing, we feel secure in accepting its truth now. The following experience of a Jacksonville man is confirmed after three years.

Frank Kasshafer, bailiff county court, Applegate Road, Jacksonville, Ore., says: For years I worked as a tinner and it caused kidney and bladder trouble. Pain first attacked me in the small of my back, especially when I got up in the morning. I also had trouble with the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills soon removed the complaint.

AFTER A LAPSE OF OVER THREE YEARS, Mr. Kasshafer said: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and gladly confirm my former recommendations."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kasshafer has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.
