A BRIDAL VEIL OF NUN-LIKE SIMPLICITY

Some brides will be coroneted in tulle on their wedding day, some will wear a Greek bandeau to hold the shimmering lace or tulle in place, but most of the summer brides will follow fashion's dictate and wear their veils gathered, cap-fashion around their heads. In the cap-veil which promises to be popular the tulle is laid crosswise over the head in soft pleats and gathered into a cap of nun-like demureness. It is encircled with a wreath of orange blossoms.

Mrs. A. J. Hanly was hostess to the Alpha Delta class of the Christian church Thursday afternoon at her beautiful home on Welch street. There were thirty-five in attendance and a most enjoyable time was had. The president, Mrs. A. A. The Los Angeles Times contains the following regarding the wedding of Miss Gladys Evelyn Carey, daughter of Mrs. Charles H. Carey, formerly of Medford, who was recently married in Seattle to Edwin Locksley Stanton of Los Angeles, as the conclusion of a college romance at Berkeley. The young couple will make their home at Los Angeles:

"The marriage was an event of Wednesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hodges in Seattle. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Harold Carey. She wore a handsome gown of cloth of silver veiled with silk net and outlined in seed pearl and rhinestone floral design. Her veil was a misty tulle and rare lace and carried orchids. Mrs. Charles Henry Carey, her mother, wore a gown of white satin veiled in black silk lace with silver trimmings. The bride, a petite, attractive young woman—a Canadian by birth—attended the University of Washington during her freshman year and had just completed her four-years course at Berkeley, where her husband also received his degree at holiday time. The romance unfolded on the campus.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR MUSIC STUDENTS

Mrs. Irene Isaacs announces that she is organizing classes of five or six pupils at 75 cents an hour. Each pupil will receive a certain amount of individual piano instruction, from which the other members of the class will profit. Individual harmony, ear training and sight-reading will also be included. In this way the pupil will get a thorough and general knowledge of music any may ascertain whether he or she has sufficient talent to justify private training.

Class lessons stimulate interest and encourage the pupil in more conscientious home practice, thereby relieving the parents of much responsibility.

This class system is employed in the large conservatories of both Europe and America. Classes now organizing. Those desiring to join may apply to Mrs. Isaacs for lesson or further information at her studio in Bechen Apartments, corner West Main and Quince streets. Phone 816.
