EAGLE POINT EAGLETS

By A. C. Howlett

Green Mathews, one of our leading farmers and stock raisers, was in town Wednesday on his way to consult an eye specialist. He was trimming the knots off a fish pole when a done struck him and came near putting his eye out. While here the subject of blight came up and he remarked that he had got rid of all his fruit trees and putting the land out to corn, hay and small grain. Said that he rather feed the product of the farm to cattle, hogs and other kinds of stock than to be fighting the fruit pests, smudging and watching for the frost to take the fruit after waiting for years for the trees to grow. And the result of his netion is that he is adding more farms to his list and lending money to the people who are clinging to the fruit trees.

Mrs. Benjamin Brophy motored in, to town last Wednesday to transact business while her husband was looking after the stock on the farm.

Prof. E. N. Deardoff who has been teaching in the Reese creek school district, passed through here last Thursday morning on his way from his home in Ashland to be present during the examination of his eighth grade pupils. For some reason, the children or the examiner, Mr. Pedigrew, were not ready to have the examination during the school term. If I can procure the list of the applicants for eighth grade certificates and their grades, I would be glad to publish as I did the Eagle Point list.

J. S. Quackenbush and wife were in town Thursday looking for men to work in the Corbin orchard thinning the fruit, and at the same time Mr. Cummins the foreman on the All Vista orchard was inquiring for hands to work in that orchard thinning the fruit. A few weeks ago the cry was that all or all except on the upland, of the fruit had been killed and that there would not be any fruit left in the valley, but now the cry is for help to thin out the fruit as the trees will simply be ruined and the fruit will be too small if left on the trees. I have lived in the Rogue river valley continuously for the past forty-nine years and have been taking note on the weather, crops, etc., and have never known of a blight in the crop, either fruit or grain.
