

OUTDOOR PAGEANT AT ASHLAND PARK FRIDAY EVENING

Under the auspices of the Greater Medford club and Woman's Civic club of Ashland, Rogue River valley will give her first outdoor pageant at the beautiful auto park in Ashland Friday, June 9, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Deodatus, the boy poet, who is seeking "The Heart of the World," is born to Mythland in a dream. All the myths of all the ages attempt holding Deodatus in mythland by their dancing and stories.

The spirit of poesy first introduces the home of the dryads, who strew the ground with flowers preparatory to the coming of Deodatus. Deodatus coming into the sylvan glade is shown the power of beauty by the dancing dryads; Persephone and Psyche and the Graces prevail upon him to tarry, while the sea nymphs are called from the emerald surges to dance for him.

Not being convinced that beauty is the key to the heart of the world, Aurora, the beautiful goddess of dawn, dances before him. But even the most beautiful of all goddesses cannot lure him by her beauty and grace to stay in Mythland, and with the Muse of Tragedy, Deodatus leaves the home of the dryads as the dryads dance dreamily into the depth of the forest.

The Spirit of Poesy now introduces to the audience the home of the gods. We find Father Odin and his wife, Frigga; Thor and his beautiful wife, Sif; Loki, god of mischief; Hoder, the blind god; Idun, of the golden apples; Tyr, god of courage; Frey, god of sunshine, seated at a table partaking of mead and apples, while Helen, a Grecian goddess, dances for them. "The Dance of Spring."

Deodatus, tired and weary, is seen in the distance. While the gods are showing him power and prowess, Balder, the best loved of all gods, is slain by the arrow of mistletoe shot by the blind god, Hoder. As Balder is borne away, tired and discouraged, Deodatus falls asleep.

The queen of fairies, dancing in the moonlight, discovers Deodatus. In fear, she runs away. Finding he does not harm him, she continues dancing, then pirouettes into the forest, when the dwarfs continue the midnight revel. They awaken Deodatus and dance for him. In order to keep him they send to earth for a baby. Deodatus is angry and starts back to earth with the baby. Wandering in a circle, he comes to the same glade and finds the fairies dancing. They weave around him a charmed circle which nothing can break except that a mortal from earth crosses it.

The babe's mother, seeking her babe, rushes across the circle. The fairies disappear in fright, while Deodatus, finding that after all the heart of the world is in love for humanity, starts to leave mythland, but is stopped by the Spirit of Poesy, who asks him to see all fairland pass before him in grand procession. ARBITRATION TO SETTLE TROUBLE WITH MEXICO

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Arbitration of differences between the United States and Mexico, through an international commission today became a possibility.

Diplomats, particularly those of Central and South American republics were much interested in information administration officials are considering seriously proposing such a course to General Carranza. If they definitely decide to suggest this, it would be sent as the United States' answer to Carranza's last note. Acceptance would then depend on the de facto government.

Under the treaty of 1848 between the United States and Mexico the presidents of the two nations might appoint an equal number of commissioners to whom could be submitted all the vexatious questions arising out of relations between the two countries during the past few years.

Among these might be: Indemnification for American lives lost and property destroyed or damaged during recent Mexican revolutions.

Disposition of customs, revenues collected during the American occupation of Vera Cruz and now held in the United States and claims for property damages growing out of the Vera Cruz incident.

Long pending disputes concerning the exact location of certain portions of the international boundary.

The commission probably would meet in some South American country.

Whether President Wilson had reached a final decision on the question of proposing arbitration to General Carranza was not indicated today.

THE SUMMER GIRL WILL NOT BE ABLE TO RESIST THESE PRETTY SUMMER DRESSES

The styles are so attractive and the dresses so delightfully cool in appearance that you will take a liking to them the moment you lay your eyes on them. While Summer dresses may not cost you as much as your winter garments, nevertheless it's a fact that you get more real wear out of them simply because summer is the great out-of-doors time. You either go on a visit, you go for a stroll, or friends visit you. And whenever you go out, or wherever you go, you want to be as fashionably dressed as your companion. That does not mean that your summer dresses need be costly—far from it.
