

PROS AND CONS OF FRUIT POOLING IN ROGUE VALLEY

Weekly Letter of Rogue River Fruit & Produce Association Discusses Subject of Prime Importance to the Valley Orchardists—Co-operation Essential to Success in Marketing.

During the season of 1916 the Rogue River Fruit and Produce association will handle their fruit either in pools or for the individual account of the grower.

In no deciduous fruit district in the northwest, so far as we are able to learn, is there any substantial objection to the pooling system from the growers.

Objections to Pooling There seem to be two principal objections to pooling in the Rogue river valley: first, the necessary time which elapses before the growers can be paid in full for their fruit.

In answer to these objections it may be said that the elapsed time in paying for any fruit crop would be the same under either system.

Variation in Fruit The claim that certain sections of the valley grow better fruit than others seems to be true only so far as the proportion of the blue triangle grade is concerned.

are made to dispose of as much as possible through F. O. B. sales. By giving every grower the price which represents the average price of all fruit of the same variety, grade and size sold, there is little doubt that with a five year average the majority of the growers would show better results if their fruit is pooled than if it were sold for separate account.

The ease of handling the fruit sales is much simpler with the pooling system in use. For instance in 1913 the association in one day sold five cars of Blue Triangle Bartlett to five different buyers at five different prices, the grading being the same and the sizes practically the same.

Problems to be Faced The prices were all exceptionally good and there was no question as to whether the fruit should be sold on the bids or not.

HEART OF WORLD WINS APPLAUSE AT LITHIA PARK

ASHLAND, June 10.—Strictly in keeping with mythological ideals and traditions was the weird and beautiful production, "The Heart of the World," as staged in Lithia park last evening by the large company of artists embraced either within the membership or under the tutelage of the Greater Medford club.

It is planned to make a like attraction an annual event, and the wish is father to the thought that "The Heart of the World" may prove to be the harbinger of future presentations here at the hands of Medford's pleasing strollers.
