The alumni Hawaiian party, which occurred Friday evening, was by far the greatest social success of the season. The affair was staged at the armory, which was beautifully decorated with palms, vines, foliage and flowers, giving a decided tropical air to the scene. The punch bowl was indeed unique, being a miniature volcano in natural colors, the punch being served from the crater. In the background, shining out over a tropical scene, was a huge yellow moon. The punch bowl itself was a fragrant bower of honeysuckle. Clever little programs in orange and white were a hit of the evening, the Hawaiian numbers being utilized in the order of dance. A tuneful orchestra, consisting of piano, banjo, violin, tango-banjo and drums furnished the necessary "peppy" music for the dancing. The greatest feature of the evening and one which carried out the spirit of the party to the final degree was the arrival of the Royal Hawaiian Serenaders from the Page theater. These popular musicians furnished music and songs for the dancers till nearly 1 a. m., receiving encore after encore in response to everything they rendered. When at last the party broke up, the tired but happy guests were unanimous in voting the alumni Hawaiian party the most unique and enjoyable affair ever staged by the younger set. The following patronesses were in the receiving line: Messdames M. L. Afford, Roger S. Bennett, F. W. Thorne, H. B. Patterson, Edw. Souther and E. N. Warner.

Public indorsement of the Medford Choral society following the recent initial concert has been genuine and generous. Officers and members of the society appreciate the value of this sincere public approval of their work in the recent concert, and the society, having now passed the initial and experimental stages, is assured as a permanent organization devoted to the development of the best choral music. From time to time converts of merit may be expected and it is not at all improbable that with further development of musical interest in the valley an organization may be perfected that will make the name of Rogue River valley famous on the Pacific coast for more than fruit and climate. As pointed out in the remarks of the director, George Andrews, following the concert, one little town in Kansas with a population of 2500 people is annually staging one of the greatest musical festivals in the world, thousands of people being in attendance and several days being devoted to concerts of the highest order, with distinguished artists in attendance.

An offer has been recently accepted by the society to sing at the opening of the Ashland chautauqua and a program similar to that recently rendered in the Page theater will be given. It is in every way likely that societies will be organized in other centers in the valley, resulting eventually in a well-organized valley society. This is the aim and desire of the director and members of the Medford choral.

It is planned to have baby tests in the fall and mothers may register their babies whenever they desire. All who are interested are cordially invited, those from the rural districts as well as those living in town, and it is earnestly hoped that there may be a general response and co-operation.
