EM-TEES

One June Wedding

He thought himself a despot. It flattered him to hear he was so masterful, so strong; he felt a horn commander when she looked up, half in fear, yet trustfully, from 'neath her lashes long; he wished someone to bully, so he confidently led her altarward, a timid little thrall; he thought himself a despot until after they were wed, then he found he was a two-spot—that was all.

—Lee Shipley, in Judge.

The Simple Pleasures

My Jones' team ran away at Hunt Saturday, tickling all who saw them, but doing no damage.—The Clarks-ville (Ark.) Democrat.

Brute!

"I thought you had given up burnt wood art, dearie." "Ferdinand, how can you be so heartless? This is a pie."

Frankness

Eight years ago I took my first job working on automobiles—polishing brass in a garage—since then I have tried everything from that to selling autos. And still I don't know everything about them. If you don't believe me—give me a trial the next time you have trouble.—H. B. Perkins, Farmdale.—Adv. in the Kinsman (O.) Courier.

The Way Pain Is

George Denton has been confined to his home since last Saturday. He is suffering with rheumatism, which has developed a very painful pain, and he is unable to put any weight on his limbs. He is greatly missed at his barber shop.—The Girard (Ill.) Citizen.

The Man of Science

Doctor Weselowski has had his parrot over thirty years and has always called him "he." Last week "he" laid four eggs.—The Jewell (Kan.) Republican.

Economy

Crawford—I hear that he's economizing. Crabshaw—Yes; he doesn't buy anything now unless he can get it on credit.

How It Is Done

A. J. S. Buttencourt of Langley road has hired the W. M. Mick farm of 48 acres on Dedham street, and will grow milk weed there.—Newton (Mass.) Town Crier.

Getting Into Society

"Guess I'll have to rig up a middle name," declared Flubdub. "I never had one, but I gotta have one now." "Why so?" "My wife demands one to print on her visiting cards."

"THE CRIME OF 1916"

"ONE of the greatest crimes in the history of American politics was committed when Theodore Roosevelt killed the Progressive party," says the Chicago Day Book, and this is the attitude of the Progressive press and a large number of Progressives toward their erstwhile idol who permitted his sincere followers to pay their expenses from every part of the Union to Chicago, shout and sing his praises for three days, and then "delivered them into the hands of the enemy"—into the hands of the Old Guard of the G. O. P., through the manipulations of reactionary Boss Perkins.

Bitter complaints are being sounded that Roosevelt used the love of his followers as a "gun to hold up the Old Guard and force his own nomination—and when his bluff was called and Hughes nominated, Roosevelt turned yellow as a lemon and quit cold."

The prediction that the "cowards will quit like their cowardly hero" and follow him back into the camp of the G. O. P. bosses is already being realized. Raymond Robbins, who was chairman of the Progressive convention, told the Illinois bull moose gathered for funeral ceremonies, that Hiram Johnson, James R. Garfield and Gifford Pinchot had followed the colonel back to the G. O. P. and that he himself would refuse to follow them, but would join the democratic party.

What turned the red in the colonel's veins to yellow? If his cause was just, why does the prospect of defeat dismay him? Is it possible Teddy is a "mollycoddle"? One thing certain, not even "weasel words" will restore the halo to the fallen idol.

But the colonel never was a sincere Progressive. He created the Progressive party from expediency to jimmy his way back into the presidency, and when he could not force his nomination again, abandoned the instrument. Men who fight for principle do not act in this manner. He has traded progressivism for militarism and the price he pays for party peace is dishonor.

The Chicago Public remarks:

Theodore Roosevelt has many admirable qualities, but democracy is not one of them. His mind is essentially autocratic; he is at best a benevolent despot. He is one of those who wish to "do the people good," instead of letting the people do themselves good. His political career is marked by many good acts, but all of them done in a wrong way. He was, in short, an optimist of colossal egotism. His daring brought ardent admirers to his side, but his self-assertion repelled more. He was not as some have supposed, broad minded, but scatter minded; he thought intently upon all phases of human activity, but he was unable to co-ordinate them and so sank out a consistent course of action. He was primitive in his enthusiasm, childish in his vanity. A party so wrapped up in the fortunes of such a man was, from the beginning, doomed to failure.

OPENING ROAD TO CRATER LAKE

Two forces of men are engaged in digging a trench eighteen inches wide through the snow from Camp Steel to White Horse, a distance of four miles, according to Court Hall, who returned last night, having taken a crew of men to assist in the work. Working from opposite ends of the road, he says that they will meet today.

The snow is melting rapidly, although a snow fell Tuesday and Wednesday. A warm chinook wind is blowing and when this gets access to the snow through the trench it is expected that the road will be clear in four or five days so that cars can get through.

The crews will begin the work on Monday of digging a similar trench from Camp Steel to the rim, and if the chinook wind keeps up it is thought that cars will get to the rim by July 5.

Mr. Hall says the roads are in very good condition, although they will probably get dusty early in the season.

SIX PERISH IN FIRE AT NEEDLES

NEEDLES, Cal., June 24.—Six bodies have been taken from the ruins of the Needles business section, which was destroyed early today by fire.

Firemen began searching the ruins at daybreak wherever the constant streams of water had cooled the wreckage sufficiently.

Nick Johnson, a mining man, was burned to death as he stood on the veranda of the Needles hotel while hundreds of persons watched.

SAILOR ESCAPED DETENTION CAMP

"Two brothers killed is enough from my family," says Fritz Schmidt, who arrived in Medford this morning after a series of adventures that began a month after the outbreak of the war. Fritz, who is a sailor, with tanned face and a roll in his gait, was taken, with six other Germans, from his ship, the Balterby, when she docked at Melbourne, Australia, and led to a detention camp near the city, where he found himself in a guarded, walled compound with some 400 countrymen.

Confinement was irksome to Fritz, even though the prisoners had their theater, their hands and plenty of reading matter, not to mention a shilling a day and three good meals. After nine months in the camp he was put on parole and allowed the freedom of Melbourne, on condition of reporting once a week. After two months of this Fritz signed as a Swede on the Norwegian ship Hans B. Olsen, bound for San Francisco. Since the ship docked six months ago he has been doing odd work in interior towns.

"I'm not going to stick around the water where they might get me in jail again or send me to fight," said Fritz. "I won't fight for anyone or anything, except for my living."

SUCCESSFUL BAND CONCERT LAST NIGHT

Another successful concert was given by the Medford band on Friday evening in the city park, which was brilliantly illuminated, the new lights being turned on for the first time. The park was crowded with people and the streets lined with autos, making a pretty scene when the lights were turned on. Possibly it was the patriotic airs that won the enthusiasm of the vast audience, or probably it was the good performance of the band, however, the applause was not stinted in the least, the band being compelled to respond to encore after encore.

The first march, "Long Live the U. S. of A.," by Miller, which has the "Star-Spangled Banner" for basses with a trumpeting obligato, is a stirring and patriotic composition and was one of the band's best efforts. The "American Patrol," which features much the drummers, was very effective, the expression all through this descriptive being well observed. Other popular items were the "Royal Pageant" overture and the waltz, "Nights of Gladness." Next week's concert will be given on Friday evening. The band will hold the regular rehearsals on Monday and Thursday evenings.
