GOOD VAUDEVILLE AT PAGE THEATRE

The "Deane's Manikins" make their first appearance in Medford last night to a fine house. This act is a decided novelty and certainly turned out to be all that was claimed for it. No doubt scores of Medford theatergoers will remember having seen this act in Portland, Seattle, San Francisco and other large cities. They also appeared for two months at the exposition.

It would probably be more accurate to describe this act as an entire show, as these remarkable little wooden actors do about everything you could expect to see in a regular vaudeville house. They are even provided with their own audience. One of these, an enthusiastic old first-nighter, keeps the real audience in constant laughter by his persistent flirting with the ballet girls.

Their closing feature, the "Bottom of the Sea," is a very elaborate spectacle. This has been adapted from the novel by Jules Verne, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

There is also a special Fox comedy in addition to the above act, and for the entire five reels it overflows with humorous situations remarkable for their bright originality. Altogether it is an exceptionally good program and will be given again today (Thursday).
