CIVILIZATION'S CHILD AT THE PAGE TONIGHT

Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the Kay-Bee corner of Triangle, is chucking mightily these days over his discovery of Anna Lehr, the new star who is playing in "Civilization's Child," a new feature from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, at the Page tonight and Tuesday.

He engaged her, for leads when other producers passed her by with the proverbial "cold bright eye." She has succeeded beyond all expectations in being a first-class "register," with big melting gray eyes, loops of blonde hair and a tremulous mouth that betrays the slightest ripple of feeling within.

In this sense Anna Lehr has invested pictures with the eloquence that rightfully belongs to them—not the sound and intonation of voice, but the appeal to imagination which is infinitely more effective. Directors say they never have worked with an actress more keenly alive to the exigencies of a situation or more responsive to suggestion. Her transitions may be sudden when required by the occasion, but they always blend smoothly into one another.

Miss Lehr was born in Austria, but came to America when a child. Since then she has played on both sides of the water, supporting some of the leading actors of the day. She is young and of striking intellectual type.

WOMEN NEXT ON LIST FOR BALLOTS

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The decision that the undertaking of new franchise and registration reform in the midst of a great war was too complex and controversial a problem, was announced by Premier Asquith in the house of commons. At a time, said the premier, when the war had reached a happy, promising stage, and when it more than ever required the absolute concentration of the government, it was impossible to consider the large questions involved in a revision of the franchise. He further implied that any new bill for franchise reforms in the future must of necessity include women.

The run was due to reports spread by a man, who telephoned depositors a "tip" that the bank was not safe. Efforts to locate this man have failed. Depositors were assured that the institution was absolutely solvent, but to make build ones feel safe, $500,000 was put on the counter in plain sight.

MEXICO REAPS REAL REFORMS

tions are now operated for governmental benefit. Alvarado established a government commission to control the handling and marketing of the entire sisal crop. Its finances were arranged through a group of New Orleans bankers who underwrote a credit of $10,000,000, and the commission was thus enabled to tell the International Harvester company and the Plymouth Cordage company that they could no longer dictate the price of sisal in Yucatan and the price of twine in the United States.

Effect Marvelous. "The effect in Yucatan has been marvelous. The sisal planters can now walk erect without fear of forced bankruptcy. Over $20,000,000 gold was the Yucatan value of the year's crop, and this vast sum was spent largely in the United States for food, clothing, machinery and building material shipped to Yucatan. Wages advanced from 10 cents a day to upwards of 50 cents a day. The peons were freed from the contract labor law and the law of debt. They are free to go and come as they please and to work where they please. "But Governor Alvarado has done more important work. He has restored to every village an area of common land, so that every family can have a garden plot sufficient to raise its fruit and vegetables. He has made plans for the collective cultivation of sisal on public lands. He has established over 1200 public schools, besides trade, agriculture and normal schools, and has brought teachers from the United States to organize and conduct them. "Governor Alvarado is aided by a volunteer association of the most advanced and highly educated men and women of Yucatan, called the 'Ateneo Peninsular de Yucatan.' The members serve without pay, and have undertaken the sanitation of the towns and cities, the solution of problems of sewage and water supply, the building of model houses and schools, the further development of a model educational system and the problems of land distribution and scientific taxation. They are even going into problems of town planning on the most modern lines of symmetry and beauty. "The change is visible to any present traveler in Yucatan. All classes, rich and poor, high and low, have caught the enthusiasm of Governor Alvarado and his splendid corps of assistants and are working in hearty accord to carry on true reforms so happily begun."
