MEDFORD MONEY FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A SAWMILL

The local business mind is becoming obsessed with the idea that, before Medford can make further progress in substantial growth, it must have the payroll. The only way to obtain the payroll is to establish industrial enterprises. The deduction contained in the first statement and the latter are troubles.

Local business men have, therefore, concluded to begin the development of local timber resources by the establishment of a sawmill. That is the only way to accomplish that purpose. The reason that local business desire to develop the local timber resources is found in the fact that, by doing it themselves, they not only acquire the payroll necessary in this development, but they keep the dividends at home. Not only is the most of the production of lumber kept in local circulation, but the profit on the product, owned by local people, is kept at home.

Company Now Being Formed. With this combination of ideas in view, a local company is now in process of formation for that purpose. S. S. Bullis, president of the Southern Oregon Traction Company, who is an old-time saw mill man, has subscribed $10,000 to a fund of $25,000 for that company. The fact that Mr. Bullis is willing to subscribe the largest individual sum, thus giving the controlling interest to other local business men, who will subscribe the remaining $15,000, ought to be taken as evidence of his confidence in the enterprise and the profits of its operation. Mr. Bullis expresses a willingness to invest in this project purely as a business proposition.

Box Factory Will Follow. The saw mill contemplated in this project will yield a constant payroll of approximately $2,000 a week. The box factory will follow with a larger payroll, because it will require a greater number of operatives. This will make a fair start out of the rut of inactivity from which local people have suffered severely for years. Other enterprises will quickly follow in the wake of these institutions of business, and thus we will recover our business equilibrium.

Early next week, in order to insure sufficient capital to handle the proposition, business men who are interested in this enterprise will ask other local men to invest what they may in it. The time is short in which to take advantage of an attractive offer of plant and equipment. It is the desire of those who have this matter in hand that to make it wholly a local project, thus enabling them to keep at home, not only all the money invested, but all of the profits accruing from the operation of the plant, including the payroll.

The Medford baseball team will leave this morning for Brookings, where they will play during the Chetco carnival. The Ashland band will make the trip.

The banks, county and city offices and postoffices will be closed Monday, September 4, as it is Labor Day, and a legal holiday. The barber shops will close.

CIRCUS FALLACIES ARE HEARD AGAIN

How many foolish circus rumors have you heard since the first advertising ear of the Barnum & Bailey show visited Medford and announced that the "greatest show on earth" would exhibit here on Monday, September 11 for one performance at 10 a. m.?

Have you heard that perennial antiquated report that the show always divides into two after it leaves New York City in the spring, and that only half of it will be seen here, the other half being on exhibition in some other portion of the country?

No more foolish phony ever existed. It would be a physical impossibility to divide the great Barnum & Bailey circus and from a business standpoint it would be suicidal. The most peculiar feature of this absurd and unfounded rumor that is circulated nearly every year is the fact that such a thing has never even been attempted in the history of circuses.

A divided show would mean two separate and distinct organizations, two enormous menageries, two complete equipments of canvas and railroad trains, two hosts of employees and performers. Such a scheme would be about as feasible as to divide a great ocean liner into two or more parts and send each part to a different port.

Of course, at a certain period during the summer there is nothing that engages the attention of the youngsters and the oldsters as does the coming of the big circuses, and it is quite natural that its advent should be much discussed in advance. It is decidedly unfair, however, both to the general public and to the circus, to circulate stories that create doubt in the public mind and work harm to the circus in a business way. No business institution in the world suffers as much from false stories and rumors as the circuses do, and no business institution better deserves to have the truth told about it than does the circus, for it is the one typical national amusement enterprise, entering to all ages and classes. The Barnum & Bailey circus, and the other big enterprises are operated as clean, legitimate amusement organizations. Their tremendous size alone make it possible for them to give a larger, costlier and better entertainment at a smaller cost to the patron than any other form of amusement.

According to the police authorities in the cities which the Barnum & Bailey circus has exhibited already this season, the show is absolutely clean in every detail and every promise made by its advertising departments and the management is rigidly observed. It has no undesirable following of blacklegs, petty thieves and cheap gamblers, and a woman or child is as safe on the circus grounds alone as with an escort.

NO STRIKE BILL PASSES

(Continued from page one) has signed the eight-hour bill. Another meeting of the officials will be held tonight after the senate has acted on the house bill.

That was all Mr. Garretson, leader of the brotherhood, would say regarding the probable time of the calling off of the strike. This was the first statement showing that the house bill was wholly satisfactory to the brotherhood. Any amendment to the house bill in the senate would throw all the negotiations in the indefinite stage and with that in mind, administration leaders used every effort as the debate in the senate progressed to insure passage of the house bill in its original form.
