

MONKEY DINNER MAY BE FEATURE OF GOLDEN SPECIAL

Great preparations are being made by the Hughes Alliance for a rousing reception to be given the Morgan-Vanderbilt - Guggenheim - Belmont "golden special" train, financed by Wall street and carrying women of the New York "400" on their missionary tour, seeking converts for Hughes.

The train, itself is a palatial affair, the finest of the kind ever employed in a political campaign and carries all the comforts of home. One car is reported specially designed for bridge parties and pink tea will be graciously poured for the common people. Another compartment car, it is reported, carries the poodle-dogs and pet monkeys so that the queens of the smart set can preside at their customary functions.

There is much excitement over meeting these famous monkeys and poodles, and hopes are entertained that a rousing welcome will result in an invitation to dine. Perhaps Medford people may be invited to bring their own pets, and are somewhat in a quandry. Medford boasts no monkeys and only a few poodles, but is strong on tom-cats. It is understood, however, that only imported hyphenated foms with whiskers like Hughes' are received in the smart set.

Some who are anticipating entertainment at the hands of the "400" are very optimistic as to the form it may take and are hoping for that rarest and most insidious function, a monkey dinner. It is suggested that a similar local function might be attempted to familiarize local climbers with the etiquette of such occasions, but also Medford has no zoo. Hope, however, is not entirely dead, as the recent G. O. P. gibberings suggest material for a near "baboon dinner," which is good enough for a prohibition state.

Another barrier has appeared in the Oregon dry law, which only allows intoxicants to be received by a "person or family" and makes no provision for the monkey. This is another blot on the Oregon system and an index to the inability of the people to legislate.

There is no prohibition upon cigarettes, however, and the "golden" ladies can be assured of their favorite brands.

COUNTY WINNER AT STATE FAIR

Jackson county captured first prize on farm displays, six firsts on box apples and all firsts on pears at the state fair at Salem, according to a telegram received this morning from D. M. Lowe, who is in charge of the county exhibit. These scores brought Jackson third prize among competing counties on general display.

The exhibit sent to the state fair was largely made up of prizewinners at the Jackson county fair held in Medford two weeks ago.

ADAMSON BILL AND TARIFF MAIN THEME OF HUGHES

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Sept. 29.

Charles E. Hughes motored over muddy streets through the first rain storms he has experienced since commencing his campaign August 5, to address an audience here today. The strenuous program laid before him by the national chairman was vetoed by the nominee himself, who merely appeared on the rear platform of his car so that the crowds might see him at stations between Saratoga and Binghampton. It had been planned to have him speak at these stations, but at the last moment it was decided to have local speakers take his place so that he might conserve his voice.

Mr. Hughes spoke of the protective tariff. "I tell you fellow citizens," he said, "we are facing a critical period. It is no time to be talking of a tariff for revenue only. We need protection to our industries and there is no man in the country today who can tell you where the democratic party stands with respect to protection of American interests. It takes all of us, too, to make the United States and to make our country prosperous and we'll never do it unless labor and capital work together amicably."

The nominee renewed his attack on the administration for the Adamson bill. He declared that he "would like to see an eight-hour work day," but that he stood squarely for investigation before legislation and would "not yield an inch either to labor or capital," in that principle.

FOUL CITY WATER MAY LAST WEEK OR MONTH LONGER

The foreign odor and taste in the city water will continue at least a week, and may last for a month, according to Water Superintendent Olen Arnsperger. The Rogue River Canal company, he explained, is draining the water from Fish lake in order to gather and burn the debris in the bottom of the lake. At the same time, they are adjusting the gates at the outlet of the lake, sometimes lowering and sometimes raising them so that the water and sediment is being constantly rolled up. When a large head is allowed to pass through, the creek is raised, and by the time the water reaches the city intake it has picked up a large accumulation of silt and vegetable matter from the banks.

If the condition of the water is not abated within the next two or three days, Arnsperger stated, he will go to the lake and endeavor to have the gates opened as wide as the size of the creek bed will allow and complete the drainage in the shortest possible time. However, there are between 500 and 600 acres covered with water, and at best it will require a week to empty the area of water.

In spite of the odor and taste, he continued, there need be no fear of contamination from the water, as the tests recently made show the water to be remarkably free from bacteria. The safe way, however, is to boil the drinking water.
