HAYMARKET RIOT

the unionized jitney-bus operators. Edward Nolan had something to do with the street car strike, and Mooney aside from his dynamite activities, was a union organizer and leader in the electrical workers' strike.

Strikes are real and strikes are earnest, out here in San Francisco, and the industrial battles of the past have engendered some deep hatreds on both sides.

Case of Hysteria.
A man like Mooney or Billings would not draw the line at blowing up an electric tower as a preliminary to a walk-out of drivers and conductors, but they are not such fools or degenerates as to sit down and conspire with three other fools or degenerates to set off a handful of dynamite among a lot of working girls.

As the hysteria dies down and the average person begins to get his sober, second thought, these facts begin to stand out in his mind.

Bob Minor, the cartoonist, has done more than anybody to stop this law-court lynching. Hearing about the arrests while in Mexico in search of war cartoons, Minor raced to San Francisco, and organized a defense committee.

Gradually he gained supporters, hired Maxwell McNutt, who had formerly prosecuted the dynamiters, to defend the five accused, and it looks now as if they would save San Francisco from repeating that grim mistake which Chicago made in its "Haymarket riot" case.

Carl of Thanks.

We sincerely think the many friends and neighbors, who were so kind in our hour of sorrow. The passing of our little daughter and sister, also the beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Garrison, Ethel Garrison.

WALL STREET FOR HUGHES

Lesser prizes. They are confident that he will not say anything during the entire campaign to which the financial interests might take offense.

Hence they feel justified in making really exorbitant demands on the national committee. Mr. Wilcox, according to some of the begging leaders, fails to grasp the importance of "digging up enough money to carry the close states." He is even branded as "a tight wad."

It is the opinion of the national chairman, and presumably of Mr. Hughes, that no financial stimulus is necessary to accelerate the tidal wave of Hughes sentiment, which they think is sweeping over the country. Both are entirely complacent, according to reports of men who have access to their state of mind. They have both informed skeptical leaders presenting demands for money that there is not the slightest doubt of the favorable outcome of the November contest to the republicans—not a shadow of doubt; and consequently no need for money.

The hard and seasoned warriors, who privately admit the uncertainties of the pending contest, and who are not really sure of victory, do not share the confidence of their candidate and chairman of the national committee. They think the battle can be won, but only by the hardest kind of work—plus a great deal of money.
