BAND TO GIVE WINTER CONCERTS

The series of popular winter con certs to be given by the Medford band under the direction of Bang master Rowland, will be inaugurated on Tuesday evening, December 12th The concerts will be held at the Nat atorium which is to be rearranged to accommodate the band and au dience. The public is respectfully requested to hold the evening of De cember 12th open so that the band will receive the maximum support o the whole community. An effort to be made to adjust any function that may be booked for that date so as to avoid any confliction with the band's mammoth entertainment. The concert will be the initial performance of the monthly winter concerseries to be given by the Medford band and all indications point to a crowded house. The band will have the assistance of several prominent artists which together with a splendid program of overtures and selec tions which the organization has been working on for some time, will round out an attractive entertainment. The price of admission is going to be made to sult overyone's pocket, and there will even be a special rebate for children. It is generally conceiled that the winter band concerts will fill a long felt want in Medford

SYMBOL OF A FALLACY

F RANCIS JOSEPH, they say, started the war, Perhaps he did; but for twenty years he had kept the peace of Europe.

Perhaps he did; but the war was all made, a tottering tower of lies and rivalries, ever ready to erash in chaos over the workers of Europe, long before Francis Joseph gave the push that launched the avalanche of destruction. It was built by decades of national jealousies, secret diplomacy and reckless tariffs. Francis Joseph's was the hand that set the monster in motion, with his ultimatum to Serbia; but had Francis Joseph restrained his vengeance, the war would have come, just the same, with a few years more of preparation to add more terrors to its crash. Francis Joseph was but the instrument of despotism, the living symbol of that passing fallacy, the "divine right of kings.

Of the three great autoerats-the ezar, the kaiser and himself-he was perhaps the most human, the least blameworthy. He ruled a good deal by inspiring good will, not terror. Believing profoundly in his God-given right to govern, he scorned the elaborate systems of tyranny against the individual erected in Berlin and Petrograd; unprotected by any such bureaucracy as had the kaiser and the ezar, his rule was as absolute as either of theirs.

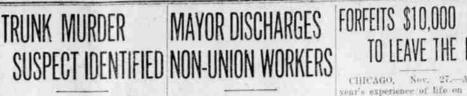

Alone in his palaces, the "man of sorrows" held his conglomerate empire together—an empire of nineteen nationalities, without a common tongue. Before the war they used to say that when Francis Joseph died, Austria-Hungary would fall apart. On the eve of the combat they said that should Francis Joseph die, Europe would be bathed in blood.

And why is Europe bathed in blood? Not because of men like Francis Joseph, surely; but because of the system that permits potentates like Francis Joseph.

Autocracy breeds war. Democracy is its remedy.

All wars will not vanish, perhaps, when autocrats are gone. There have been wars founded on real national differences. There will be more such wars. But democracy gives much less chance for conflict between nations.

But when autocrats like Francis Joseph, and autocracies like those that surround the kaiser and the czar, no longer impose their scheming sway over great nationswhen the dark tunnels and sewers of diplomacy are bared to the light-the most fertile breeding place of war, earth's greatest pestilence, will have disappeared.
