EVOLUTION OF BAKING THE TURKEY

The essence of Thanksgiving Day has always been Hospitality, but it meant an endless amount of work for the housewife. Cooking was removed from the fire place to a coal or wood stove, then to a gas range and now mother bakes her mince pies in a modern electric oven, in which cooking has become an exact science. She no longer wears the old time kitchen clothes, because much of the duty work of tending the fire is eliminated. Her electric range is beautiful as well as useful.

The coffee is made in an electric percolator at the table. All the utensils are bright, new, clean.
