

INSTRUCTIONS FOR SPRAYING OF ROSES

There are two common diseases of the rose in this valley, namely, mildew and Black Spot.

Mildew: Of the two the mildew is the most destructive and is especially serious on rambler varieties. There are two stages of mildew, the summer stage being the most common and destructive, and is readily recognized by its dusty-white growth over the surface of the leaves, young growing shoots and buds.

Black Spot: Circular spots develop on the upper surfaces of the leaves in which radiating strands of fungus mycelium can be seen. Sometimes several spots will grow together and often covering the whole leaf surface.

Control Measures—for both diseases: 1. Careful cleaning up of all leaves and destroying them by burning.

2. Thorough spraying with any good fungicide as a dormant spray. The ground below the bushes should be sprayed covering a radius of about three feet besides spraying the bushes thoroughly.

3. Thorough spraying with any good fungicide as a dormant spray. The ground below the bushes should be sprayed covering a radius of about three feet besides spraying the bushes thoroughly.

4. For Black Spot use strong commercial ammonia rather than washing ammonia. Use this spray when the black spot first appears and repeat several times at intervals of a week or ten days.

Recommendations will be given later for the control of aphids of roses.
