ORGANIZATION OF LOWER HOUSE OF CONGRESS A GUESS

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Uncertainty felt about the capitol for the last week over an early session of congress was replaced today by preparations for the special session called by President Wilson for April 16, five weeks from Monday, to consider appropriation bills and other important measures on which final action was not taken before adjournment of the 64th congress last Sunday. The new body probably will be asked to consider the armed neutrality bill specifically authorizing President Wilson to arm American ships and appropriating funds for the purpose despite the president's decision yesterday that he has already power to put naval guns and gunners and ammunition on American merchantmen. The organization of the new house cannot be foretold at this time, for a majority is 218 and the standing is: Republicans 215; democrats, 214; prohibitionist, progressive, progressive-protectionist, socialist and independent, one each; vacancy in democratic district one. Both republican and democratic leaders declare they will have support from enough of the so-called independent group to control the organization, but there is considerable talk of a coalition organization. The new senate is democratic by a majority of 12. Speaker Clark believes congress will find so much work before it that it will continue in session until August, 1918.
