Their home at 619 Plum street is at present being remodeled before they move into it. Mr. Wright, who is a watchmaker and engraver, was formerly employed in several Medford jewelry stores and formerly played in the Page theater orchestra. "During our absence in California," said Mr. Wright on Wednesday, "we resided at Long Beach, San Diego, Santa Clara and Oroville at various times, but we just couldn't keep away from Medford any longer. Medford's climate is the best—at least it seems the best to us."

"Anella Ministries," an illustrated stereopticon lecture by Rev. F. T. Porter, will be given at the First Christian church tonight at 8 o'clock. The lecture is out of the ordinary and the Oregon Journal says, "The speaker seeks the young and old charmed by the beautiful poetic language, a veritable paradise of flowers from beginning to end."

The first pedometer, the new two-wheeled motor driven vehicle, ever seen in Medford was driven around the streets Tuesday and Wednesday by an agent of the pedometer factory. The outfit speeding over the pavements with the rider or driver standing erect was an unusual and odd sight. "Let's go back to Hornbrook" remarked a red-nosed California visitor to his friend as they watched the new fangled contrivance speed by. "These here bone dry Oregon nights is too much for me."
