The Medford boys at the army aviation training station, North Island, near San Diego, are growing accustomed to a bean diet and like it, too, according to Seely V. Hall, who in a recent letter to a Medford friend writes: "Our mainstay is beans. We have them baked, raw, boiled, fried and stewed, and then the cooks make hash out of what is left. But at that one gets so he likes them."

Gasoline and oil at De Voe's. "If the people of Medford would remember, when they have occasion to summon the fire department by phone to name the nearest cross-street to the burning building," valuable time would be gained in getting to work on the fire," said J. W. Lawton, chief of the Medford fire department Wednesday.

"For instance a house is on fire at 800 South Oakdale street. When you phone you should say 'fire at 800 South Oakdale, near Dakota street.'" Then the department drivers know at once where the fire is, instead of having to guess the location by the street number.
