"Civilization," the great 19-reel war spectacle, will be the attraction at the Star theatre Tuesday, matinee and evening. "Civilization" is a protest against war, but it is in no sense a pacifist plea. The justifiable war is not touched upon, only those wars incited by ambitious monarchs to bring to themselves military aggrandizement. At the same time the picture does show what terrible effects war has, of its miseries and sorrows and hardships, these being, of course, characteristic of all wars. The picture is the most intense one that ever produced, the entire movement from start to finish being of almost continuous tense dramatic action. The photography of the play is wonderful and the acting of the principals excellent. One of the remarkable features of the drama is the huge crowds that appear in some of the pictures. In the one where the mothers appeal for peace there are claimed to be 10,000 people, and there is no reason to believe that the claim is exaggerated.
