COMMUNICATION

To the editor: I ought to be entitled to space in your paper to correct the misleading and false statements as to my attitude toward the Red Cross.

The person who reported to the papers my recent remarks before the school board perverted them apparently with the intention of doing me an injury.

It is quite true that I opposed loaning the sewing machines owned by the school districts.

Against the Law The law does not permit the board to loan or hypothecate any property belonging to the district.

It was, therefore, a surprise when Mr. Palmer, in reverse of his recent former action, and the two new members, who ten minutes before had taken the oath to support and maintain the law, thus proceeded to disregard it.

I also confess to having argued that the garments, bandages and other articles used by the Red Cross are made in large factories on the Atlantic coast in proximity to the mills that supply the raw material.

Contributed to Red Cross Even in this period of hysteria one should be allowed to make a sensible observation without being stigmatized as unpatriotic and "opposed to the Red Cross."

I have made contributions both to the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. for war and betterment of the soldiers.

W. E. PHIPPS, Medford, June 21st, 1917.

(Editor's Note.—The report of Mr. Phipps' remarks concerning the Red Cross at the Tuesday evening school board meeting as printed in the Mail Tribune were substantially correct, state those who heard them.

SERVING FAMILY AND NATION.

SECRETARY HOUSTON has appealed to American housewives to assist the national food conservation movement by canning or preserving perishable fruits and vegetables.

Pointing out that the ordinary harvest yield will be greatly increased this year by the "back yard gardening" campaigns, Mr. Houston declared that not to conserve this valuable food surplusage would be "a sinful waste."

"As the transportation pressure of the railroads will become heavier because of large shipments of food for military purposes, it is the duty of all to endeavor to relieve this condition by utilizing to the greatest extent all locally produced foodstuffs," says the secretary.

"All any home should expect of others is the foods which cannot be produced effectively by its own members," he adds.

If you preserve at home, put up more fruit than ever before. Get jars and glasses, bottles and crocks ready to save the fruit crop.

You can show your thrift in no more convincing way than by combating the national tendency to squander this country's wonderful fruit crop.

BUSINESS UNUSUAL.

"BUSINESS as usual?" Impossible. It isn't in the cards. War is now the nation's business. Will be until kaiserism is lied. And war isn't usual. It's unusual.

That's the thing business men must get in their heads. We've got to readjust business. There will be plenty of money. Business will expand.

First—let every manufacturer understand that the demand for necessities will be unusually large and the demand for luxuries unusually small.

Second—After all, this is a defensive war on our part. If we fail our business will go to smash.

Food hogs, coal hogs, railroad hogs, material hogs, supply hogs, industrial, commercial and financial hogs—all these are a menace to the successful prosecution of the nation's business.

Germany has made war the business of the nation since starting the conflagration. For half a century before, preparation for war was the business of the empire.

The sooner congress realizes that usual rules cannot cover unusual situations and that rhetoric and red tape cannot save an imperilled people and concentrates its energies upon the war, the sooner will victory be possible.

ELKS ESCAPE FROM KLAMATH; NOW IN CASCADES

Three large lks from the Klamath county herd of 14 elk escaped Sunday from the enclosure in which the herd was confined and it is thought that they may cross over the mountains and appear in the vicinity of the headwaters of some of the creeks emptying into the Rogue river on this side.

Ralph Ewing, inspector of fish screens, who has just returned to Medford, announces that the Klamath Falls lodge of Elks and the Sportsmen's association of that county request that residents of this county keep a lookout for the escaped elk and report to Commissioner Stone of Klamath Falls, member of the fish and game commission, or to the Sportsmen's association any news that they may hear of the whereabouts of the elk.

No effort will be made to recapture the elk but information is sought only as to their whereabouts and movements and how they are acting.

ONLY ONE SLACKER DRAFT REGISTRATION FOUND IN COUNTY

So far Jackson county seems destined to have an enviable record relative to military registration. Sheriff Ralph Jennings and his deputies after having investigated many reported cases of slackers who failed to register on that day, have uncovered but one out and out slacker.

The forenoon there were but five more cases to investigate. The one known case so far of where but one man of this county's many hundred young men of the prescribed military age failed to register, was in Ashland.

Of the many reported cases of slackers investigated, all but this one proved to be groundless, the alleged offenders being either too young or too old. The investigation carried the sheriff and his deputies into every part of the county.
