ASHLAND AND VICINITY

Lawson Riley, former high school graduate and popular in the younger men's social set, has arrived from Texas with the purpose of re-enlisting in First company. For the time being he is the guest of Glenn and Harold Simpson, chums of school days through the high school course, graduating in 1915.

FEMALE I. W. W.

PRESIDENT WILSON has exercised his prerogative and pardoned the female fanatics arrested and sentenced to 60 days in the workshop for violating district laws by picketing the White House and by displaying banners with treasonable sentiments that created rioting.

The suffragists did not deserve pardon. Their offense was intentional and followed lighter punishment for the same offense. They deserve no sympathy but should be treated as other law-breakers and suffer the penalty they intentionally incurred.

These women have shown disloyalty by seeking to embarrass the chief executive of the nation during a time when the nation faces a great crisis and is at war for preservation not only of the nation but of democracy itself.

If democracy is defeated in this final clash with autocracy, what chance is there of the political recognition of women? All the progress the sex has made has been under democracy.

This "woman's party," responsible for law-breaking, are female I. W. W. and should be interned, like male I. W. W. also attempting to coerce the government. They should be made to sew for the Red Cross, thereby doing something useful to aid democracy in the time of its peril.

THE FEARLESS SILENCED.

GERMAN autoeracy has silenced the fearless voice of Maximilian Harden, editor of the Berlin Die Zukunft, and since the war the only editor in Germany who has dared to proclaim the truth to German people.

It has long been a mystery why Harden has been permitted to voice his opinions. Frequently suppressed, his paper has reappeared to voice louder than ever his convictions. He praised President Wilson's patient diplomacy, opposed German atrocity, scoffed at the U-boat warfare, and criticised the kaiser and the general staff.

The following is an excerpt from one of Harden's editorials that brought about his own conscription and the suppression of his paper:

Parliamentary government is the solution of our internal problem. For a full decade it has been preached in these columns. Upon those in power our arguments made no impression. Meantime the inevitable has come to pass.

Russia, France, the British empire, Japan, Italy, Belgium, two Serb states, Portugal, Rumania and America—all against us; counting the colonial inhabitants, almost a billion souls.

Neutrals on three continents accuse us—openly or secretly—of brutal violation of international law. The Republic of China (three hundred and forty million inhabitants) brusquely breaks off diplomatic relations with the German empire.

Can the government that was unable to avert such a line-up of opposition deem itself superior in statesmanship to a democracy? Torrents of blood have washed away all doubts. The people which down to the humblest humpback tailor and the crippled maid was summoned to save the empire, has forgotten fear, will never again cower in child-like timidity.

You may cheer or you may groan; whatever may be the issue of this war, behind it stands, rock like, the certainty that Germany can be governed in future only by the will of her people.

Could there be any stronger indictment of German autoeracy? But why has Herr Harden been permitted to publish the truth when suppression and prison has been the fate of all others who dared lift their voices?

The reason for the immunity granted Harden probably harks back to the last days of Bismarck, who, having been dismissed from power, as a reward for his services to the fatherland by "the young whelp," as he styled the present kaiser, aired his grievances to his close friend, the young journalist who became his champion in the press.

Whatever the reason, the most fearless voice in Germany has been muffled by war-mad autoeracy rushing toward its doom.

Prodium Process Makes Tires Last Longer THE discovery of the Prodium Process is the greatest step forward in rubber manufacturing since the perfecting of vulcanization. It has given to Republic Tires a tread of super-toughness that is wear resisting to a remarkable degree. It wears down as evenly as a piece of tempered steel, and the rubber is so strong that a strip of it one and one-half inches square will suspend a weight of more than three tons. More than 100,000 sets of Republic Prodium Process Tires have been sold to tire users. We know now that the Prodium Process does make tires last longer and that millions of dollars will be saved to tire buyers. As the result of an unprecedented demand from every part of the country, we are trebling our production of Republic Prodium Process Tires.
