

MONEY TO PAY FOR WAR; EDICT OF PRESIDENT

Hour Has Struck for Blood Profiteers Who Have Been Enriched by War and by Gouging People of Their Own Land in Necessities—Facts and Figures Gathered for Arbitrary Action.

By H. N. Riekey. WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—Those of us who from the beginning of our war with Germany have had faith that President Wilson was possessed of sufficient intelligence, courage and determination to save the great working and consuming masses of the nation from the calamity of being exploited by blood profiteers, who for two and a half years wallowed in the gold which they extracted from the vital necessities of Germany's European enemies, and who consider their own nation at war, merely as another goose to be plucked, have not been living in a fool's paradise.

President Wilson kept this country out of war up to the last day, the last hour, the last minute it was possible to do so. As a profound student and interpreter of history he knew as well or better than any statesman in the world the magnitude of the task which confronted America, the great difficulties, physical, moral and psychological, to be overcome in preparing a peace-loving, unorganized democracy to wage a victorious war against the most highly organized military autocracy in the world.

Men Must Fight, Money Must Pay. During that fateful time between May when the president saw with clear vision that the preservation of this nation and the salvation of the world made war between America and Germany inevitable and necessary, and that day when he delivered his war message to congress, the president formulated in his mind a pretty definite course of action to be followed in preparing the nation for war.

Two of the fundamental positions in the plans which at that time took form in the president's mind were these: First—The whole power of the nation, physical, moral, industrial and financial, must be mobilized in the shortest possible time with absolute disregard of every consideration other than that of defeating the enemy.

Second—The enormous burdens of war must be distributed as equally as it is humanly possible to distribute them, among the hundred and ten million people of the nation. These burdens include paying for the war as well as fighting the war.

Growing Dissatisfaction. Stated in another way, this was the second proposition: Those who are best able to pay, must pay; those who are best able to fight, must fight. There must be no blood-profit.

Just because the president, being a mere man and not a Superman, has been unable to accomplish the miracle of doing everything at once, it seems to have been assumed by large numbers of people that he is not going to do some of them at all.

There is no denying the fact that among workers and consumers of the nation there is a growing impatience and dissatisfaction because so little apparent progress has been made toward limiting profits, reducing the cost of life's necessities and putting upon the owners of surplus wealth, where it belongs, the main load of the war taxation.

It is equally true that up to a very short time ago there has been a feeling of great satisfaction among the brotherhood of the blood profiteers.

piling up their blood profits or keeping what they have piled up; being a man of infinite patience, he has been willing to wait to strike the blows until he could strike them with such force that they would be effective.

Hour Has Struck. The hour has struck for the blood profiteers—the blows are about to fall; in fact, the first blow has already fallen on the blood profiteering coal operators.

By presidential proclamation $2 a ton, roughly, has been fixed as the mine price for bituminous coal. This price allows the owners of the coal mines a legitimate profit, but it eliminates the blood profit. If the owners of the coal mines are so lacking in patriotism that they refuse to produce the maximum of coal at this price, the president will not hesitate a minute to use the power which he has under the law to take over the mines and operate them on government account.

The government and people of the United States and our allies are going to have all the coal they need at a fair price during the war—that is settled. It is up to the coal operators to decide whether they keep their mines and produce the coal, or whether the government takes over their mines and produces it.

Facts All Ready for Use. What is more, the men who dig the coal out of the mines are going to get the highest wages compatible with $2 a ton and a reasonable profit.

Part of the machinery built up to make the president's blow at the coal operators effective is a wage board that will protect the mine workers by guaranteeing them fair pay.

Iron ore, finished steel, copper, oil, steamship rates, etc., are all slated for the same treatment that is now being accorded the coal operators.

For months, under the direction of the president, the various departments and commissions of the government best fitted for the task have been making investigations and calculations as to cost of production and distribution, in every basic industry in the country.

Armed With Figures. Thousands of men have been engaged in this work, and the president is armed with facts and figures which these men have gathered and interpreted. In every case these facts and figures show that there is little if any relation between the cost of production and the price to the consumer.

Blood profiteering in the most flagrant form that it ever has manifested, more flagrant even than during the two and a half years prior to our entry into the war, has been the rule of every industry. And the blood profiteers have not even been willing to let their employees share in the profits. In not one industry has it been shown that wages have increased in anything like the same proportion as profits.
