GATES DESCRIBES CONDITIONS SEEN AT FT. COLUMBIA

I have just returned from a two days' visit with Company Seven at Fort Columbia, and I must say it was the most pleasant visit I have experienced in my whole life. I ate five meals with them, some with the officers and some with the men, and I was much pleased with the food. It was clean, wholesome and well cooked. If our boys have as good food to eat the rest of their lives they surely will never have any cause for complaint. They are the healthiest looking bunch of men I have ever seen. Each and every boy has gained from four to twelve pounds. They are all well satisfied, and I did not hear a complaint from any one.

I talked with the major and a number of other officers and heard only praise of the Seventh company, and it certainly made me feel proud of the fact that I had a son who was a member of one of the finest companies on the Pacific coast. I heard nothing but praise from the boys for their officers—in fact, it seemed to be a genuine love feast all around. The men certainly appreciate the treatment accorded them by the Medford people, and it would do your hearts good to see them when they receive something from home. All the boys are welcome to anything any of the boys receive from home. A box of candy, fruit or cake does not last very long, for as soon as it is opened every one near gets a part.

Hanker After Sweets.

The food furnished by the government contains no dainties or sweets, thus causing the boys to crave it. I would suggest that any one wanting to send the boys anything that they send them sweets of some kind. The balance of the food is sufficient for them. It was my good fortune to be there when the shipment of peaches arrived. It was divided up among the boys, a crate of six baskets to each tent, and you should have seen them go after it. I shall never forget it.

Books are very much appreciated by the boys, the library being very limited, and most of the books being out all the time. I would suggest that any one having good books to spare, that they send them to the company for their library.

The boys are all anxious for active duty. While the parents would rather the boys would not leave the United States I believe if it was left to a vote of the company the vote would be nearly unanimous to go to France.

A Word to Mothers.

To the mothers of the boys of Company Seven, I would state that you should be proud and pleased that your boys have the good fortune in being members of this company. They are well fed, healthy, happy, everything is in a sanitary condition and the best interest of each individual boy is well taken care of. Anything you may decide to send to your boy will be delivered to him personally, and of anything sent to the company as a whole, your boy will certainly receive his share.

I am glad that I visited Fort Columbia and to have seen for myself the actual conditions of affairs. I came home with the full confidence that my boy, as well as all the boys, are in good hands and receiving the best that can be had under army conditions. Your blessings should go to Captain Vance, the other officers and the boys of Copmany Seven.

C. E. GATES.
