The deer hunting season will close October 15 and it is anticipated that between now and that date there will be a flood of hunting stories, which so far this year, unlike in former years, have been conspicuously absent. Up to date the season has been a dismal failure. Many hunters have gone to the hills and scoured them thoroughly but returned empty handed. The chief draw backs to the season have been the excessive dryness, the smoke from the forest fires and the temporary closing of the season at times. It is only occasionally that one hears of some one bringing in a buck. However, a few hard rains may make the season wind up in a blaze of glory.

C. A. Briggs who is well known in Medford and Jacksonville, was found guilty by Justice of the Peace Taylor yesterday afternoon of larceny and was fined $25 and costs. The complaint was sworn out by Aaron Wilkinson. Last July Wilkinson sold the relinquishment to his homestead near Jacksonville to Briggs, but reserved the rights to about 15 cords of laurel and fir wood. Later Briggs moved this wood away without permission and sold it. Inasmuch as the exact number of cords involved was not established, by agreement between Prosecuting Attorney Roberts and Gus Newbury, who defended Briggs, it was agreed to try the latter for plain larceny instead of grand larceny. Justice Taylor will allow Briggs a short time in which to reimburse Wilkinson, who is an aged man, before enforcing the fine.
