SCHOLARS STUDY FOOD SUPPLY OF ALLIED NATIONS

The English classes of the Central Point high school are making a study of Uncle Sam's food supply and method of economizing in the use of staple foods. Members of each class have given short talks on the needs of the allies and the ways in which their needs may be met.

The girls have learned one of the more practical recipes for war bread and for the use of "leftovers" and meat substitutes. Next week they will be asked to try the recipes in their own homes and report how they are liked. It is not to be expected that wheat and meat substitutes will prove superior to what we are used to, but nevertheless many delightful dishes can be prepared from them.

The boys and girls of both the high school and grades are coming up to every expectation in patriotism. Next week they will discuss with their mothers the question of how we may aid the government by making slight changes in our meals, changes which will bring about a saving in wheat, meat, dairy products and sugar, and in the actual cost of living. If every person in the United States can reduce the cost of each meal by two-thirds of a cent the total saving in a year by all of the people will be two billion dollars.

RIALTO TO SHOW FAMOUS ACTORS IN LIBERTY BOND FILMS

Wm. S. Hart, without a peer in his line in the moving picture world, robs a bank; and Mary Pickford, also without a rival on the screen in her line, holds up the desperate thug and compels him to invest his booty in Liberty bonds.

This is merely a suggestion of one of the special features to be shown in the five Liberty loan films now being distributed by the National association of the motion picture industry and which will be shown on the screen of the Rialto theater, in this city, beginning Monday, October 22.

These films are owned by the government and are exhibited by its authority. In them forty of the most famous actors, actresses and screen stars apear, each in a patriotic role. With them will appear also many of the most notable characters in the history of the United States.

The second Liberty bond pictures comprise five distinct subjects, each about 500 feet in length and each a complete episode in itself. The subjects of the films are all of a distinctly patriotic and historical nature. It is the desire of the government to reach every community in the entire country thru the medium of its leading moving picture thaeters. The Rialto was especially fortunate in securing these films for the edification and delight of the people of the Rogue River valley as only 500 prints were made.

Along with these films of the greatest stars of the motion picture world will be shown at the Rialto theater Dustin Farnum in "North of 53," a startling picturization of a virile romance of the Northland, showing Monday and Tuesday, afternoons and evenings. In this film dramatization of a beautiful story, replete with charming situations, Dustin Farnum probably does his most notable screen work. In is a magnificent photoplay.

The managers of the Rialto theater have, in their paid advertisements, consistently urged their patrons to purchase liberty bonds as their most effective participation in the great war; given $25 in the purchase of a liberty bond and have opened their theater to liberty loan orators every evening of the campaign; but their most effective hit in that patriotic work will be the presentation of the government films, showing famous stars in thrilling situations in loyal government service. These will begin Monday next.

a small fishing steamer, says a German admiralty statement issued today. The German forces suffered no loss. The text of the statement reads:

"On Wednesday light German sea-fighting forces in the northern part of the North sea, within territorial waters in the neighborhood of the Shetland Islands, attacked a convoy bound from Norway to England, consisting of thirteen vessels, including by way of protection two modern British destroyers, G-29 and G-31.

"All the ships of the convoy and the protecting vessels, including the destroyers, were destroyed with the exception of an escorting fishing steamer. Our fighting forces returned without loss or damage."

The Whole Neighborhood Knows.

Mrs. Anna Peirer, 2526 Jefferson St., So. Omaha, Neb., writes: "I can recommend Foley's Honey and Tar as a sure cure for coughs and colds. It cured my daughter of a bad cold. My neighbor, Mrs. Benson, cured herself and her whole family with Foley's Honey and Tar, and everyone in our neighborhood speaks highly of it." This reliable family remedy masters croup. CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN THE IMMIGRANT AT PAGE TODAY

Charlie Chaplin in his latest comedy, "The Immigrant," heads the big double bill which is at the Page today only. Beautiful scenery marks Harold Lockwood's story, "The Hidden Spring," which is the other feature on the program.

This feature photodrama has been picturized by Fred J. Balshofer, from the novel of the same name by Clarence B. Kelland, and depicts life in and near an Arizona mining camp.

In one scene, Mr. Lockwood, as Donald Keeth, a young lawyer, attempts to save a lumberman who plunges down a rocky cascade. In so doing he loses his own footing and is swept after him in the angry current. Together the men struggle in the foam at the foot of the waterfall and then Mr. Lockwood as Keeth aids the smaller, weaker, man to a place of safety. Incidentally, this episode furnishes the material for the climax of the play; since Dave, the lumberman, holds the secret that Keeth neds to know in his fight against graft and corruption, and in gratitude for his rescue, Dave tells the truth.

Lockwood pictures are noted for the beauty of their photography and outdor scenes. Antonio Gaudio is the cameraman in "The Hidden Spring," as in other recent Metro-Yorko productions, and the virility and bravery of the star himself must receive credit for the vigor and dash of this and other productions.
