

KERENSKY'S VISIT REVIVES HOPES OF RUSSIAN ACTION

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The unheralded appearance in London today of Alexander Kerensky, former premier of Russia, together with his announcement that he is on his way to America and that he is certain Russia soon will be fighting again with the forces of democracy against German domination, furnished the subject for a discussion in official and diplomatic circles that covered a wide range.

As there apparently had been an intimation of Kerensky's intended visit to this country, speculation naturally centered around his purpose in coming. The belief seems to be general that he not only will seek to enlist the support of his own people in this country in his efforts to rehabilitate Russia and cast off the German yoke, but will discuss the subject with officials as well.

Visit Fraught With Hopes. Appearing as he does at a time when both the United States and entente governments are earnestly considering how they may best aid Russia to rid herself of German influence and establish a stable government, the visit of the one-time dictator of that stricken nation is regarded by officials as having many and far-reaching possibilities.

Co-incident with the appearance of Kerensky in London, John Sookine, a member of the Russian commission sent to the United States by the Kerensky government a year ago, and now just back from France, said today that a few months ago, military action by the allies would have been intolerable to the people, but German aggression in spite of the peace treaty, had caused so much suffering and privation that allied intervention now would be hailed with relief.

Feeling Confirmed. Mr. Sookine's statement and that of former Premier Kerensky concerning the chance in the sentiment of the Russian masses served to bear out reports received at the state department. It is known that for some time powerful forces have been gathering within Russia itself to restore order and establish a government in accord with entente governments.

MAY DOOMSDAY MONTH FOR HUN'S U-BOAT WARFARE

LONDON, June 27.—"The month of May was really the most favorable we have yet had."

This is the comment of Archibald S. Hurd, the naval writer in the Daily Telegraph. He adds:

Sinkings Cost Dearly. "It is common knowledge that, owing to the large numbers of submarines destroyed, the enemy paid a higher price for every ton of shipping sunk than in any corresponding period since piracy was inaugurated."

"The offensive by sea was still being maintained by the Germans during May with the utmost vigor, but in spite of the unprecedented number of submarines sent to sea only 224,000 tons of British tonnage was lost, as compared with 374,000 in May of last year."

Sea Offensive Failed. "In spite of the fact that losses from marine risks were 'unduly heavy,' it can now be stated definitely that the enemy's effort to cripple us by sea and by an offensive smash on the western front has failed definitely."

"Altho exact figures are wanting of the sinking of submarines, it is known that they reached a higher figure last month than in any period since the submarine campaign began."

Movement of Defeat. "Three movements are in progress and we can view each of them with satisfaction. Firstly, the measures adopted by the admiralty last year for combating the submarine, including thousands of mines manufactured for the Straits of Dover and for interfering with the freedom of movement of enemy craft thru the northern exit to the North sea are proving fruitful. Secondly, the steps taken to defend merchant shipping against mines and U-boats—providing ships with other mine protection and organizing convoys—are giving admirable results. Thirdly, apart from the wonderful record the Americans are putting up in ship construction, British yards are making headway, owing to the fact that plans drawn up several months ago for the extension of yards and engine shops are beginning to be productive."

Mr. Hurd points out that the losses in British shipping in May exceeded the tonnage built by 23,000 tons, and concludes: "There already is evidence to show that the situation has still further improved since the end of May. The curves are continuing a most encouraging course."

COMMUNICATION To the Editor: As I have so many friends that I cannot write to personally, I thought I might interest them if I wrote to the paper so that they might all read it.

My mother, sister and I had a very interesting journey, although it was long and somewhat tiresome in places. While we were traveling in California we noticed a considerable change in the weather. The air seemed stifling because we had been having rather cool weather in Oregon. For miles and miles the hills were of nothing but rock formation, and there were no trees in sight.

The Sacramento valley is very large and it took a large part of the day to travel through it. The grain was rapidly ripening and in some places had already been out.

We arrived at Davis, a town north of San Francisco, late in the afternoon and had to wait an hour for our other train to arrive from San Francisco. The depot, a cement building, was a comfortable one, but rather old looking. The entrances were arched and the inside waiting room was in one end while the baggage room in the other, with an open waiting room between.

The train stopped quite a while at Sacramento and we were able to view the business part of the town, very well from the car window. The street cars and hotel buildings were busy carrying people up town. As we left the station we could see that the resident part of town was evidently in the eastern part and the streets were beautifully kept with lawns and flowers. The following country was planted to grain and here and there would be seen a few gnarled oaks, much like those we have at home. Before leaving California we passed by a number of fruit orchards, which were of course different than our own. One orchard I noticed particularly, because instead of being irrigated by a canal, it had beautiful and stately palm trees planted along its edge.

When we entered Nevada, the mountains made us feel very much as though we were at home. They were large and the animals were large and numerous. We went through at least 40 in less than an hour. The train stopped quite a while in the evening at a mountain spring of cool, clear water and everybody hurried from their car to get a drink. It was quite a difference from the ice water we had been drinking on the train, and was therefore, refreshing.

The next morning we found ourselves traveling in Utah and all we could see was sand and sagebrush. Late in the afternoon we crossed the Great Salt Lake and, as we were standing in the observation car, we commenced a very good view of it. The rippling blue water extended on each side of the car track as far as one could see and a few sea gulls were enjoying themselves splashing in it.

We arrived at Ogden shortly after 6 o'clock, where a stop of 25 minutes was made. We got off our train and walked down town; then as our train number was called we descended into the subway, and, ascending a stairway, were on level ground beside our train.

Early in the morning of the next day we stopped at a place where the elevation was over 8,000 feet above sea level. The air was cool and refreshing. Very few houses were visible from the car track in Wyoming, but once in a while we passed small dwelling houses, just as we reached Nebraska, the train began to gain speed.

Glidden, my birthplace, is a resident town, as most of the inhabitants are retired farmers. We are enjoying our visit immensely and the only thing that we can find fault with is the hot weather. Storms are also common in this country. The cyclone that passed through Iowa a few weeks ago, done quite a bit of damage in some places. Some of the farms were entirely robbed of buildings, and the people are now busy rebuilding them. The cyclone followed the river, and the people who lived near, saw from their cave doors, houses and barns whirling high in the air.

The rains have been rather heavy ever since the storm and now, since the weather is clearing again, the farmers are busy plowing their cornfields. We took a drive through the country near here and noticed that the main crops are oats and corn. We were told that the country for a thousand miles was planted to these two crops.

As this is all that I can think of that would be of interest to you, I will close. Sincerely yours, RUTH LUNSPACK.
