Taking advantage of the lull between grass fires and the usual demand for the fire department's services, the firemen have forsaken the hose and water for Bon Ami and a cloth, and having made a round in the fire hall—the result is illuminous. Every discernible piece of brass and pickelware, every painted piece of wood that had become tarnished, and even the fly specks on the bars of the city jail have undergone the zeal of the firefighters for neater equipment. Numerous comments on the present slightly appearance of the fire equipment have been heard.
