

SEEK TO INCLUDE 100,000 ACRES IN NATIONAL FOREST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—In introducing a bill for adding about 100,000 acres of land in southern Jackson county, Oregon to the national forests, Representative Hawley says he reserves final judgment until he learns more fully the desires of the people of that section. He introduced it at the request of cattlemen who say it is necessary to protect their grazing lands from invading herds of sheep from California.

It appears that because of the shortage of range in the San Juan valley about 10,000 sheep were brought north this season and turned to graze in the charge of Basque herders just over the Oregon side of the line. They are said to be cleaning out the feeding grounds depended upon by the resident cattlemen.

Of the 100,000 acres said to be affected, about one-third are reported to unentered Oregon and California grant lands, with perhaps an equal division of the remainder between public lands and those owned by cattlemen. The stockmen see no means of protecting themselves except by having the lands go into the forest reserves.

Mr. Hawley wants to be fully assured that local sentiment supports this solution before he goes farther with his bill. He has more than once championed the cause of those who have protested that too much land has been placed in the reserves, and it is conceded that the timber on the lands involved is not of much importance. He has been told, however, that Jackson county people approve the idea, and that the taxation of cattle in the reserve will surpass the sums derived from any possible prospective settlement.

SCARED GERMANS DEMAND ECONOMIC AID AS PEACE TERM

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Aug. 6.—Panic has seized the German commercial world with regard to conditions after the war. The Huns fear that whether or not they are victorious, their business will never again be what it was before 1914.

Dr. Lohmann, president of the Bremen cotton exchange, proposes in the governmental newspaper, the North German Gazette, that Germany should reply to the allies' threatened "raw materials war" with the following demands:

1.—Germany shall receive from the raw materials purchased by the British government (presumably for reconstruction purposes) a quantity sufficient to supply German industries for one or two years after the signing of peace.

2.—Germany shall have restored to her as much as may be left of the tonnage taken away from her in violation of international law or receive compensation therefor in kind. In addition, Germany shall have placed at her disposal sufficient tonnage to bring the above-mentioned raw materials to her ports.

3.—Germany demands that the resolutions of the allies' Paris economic conference shall not be enforced. If they are enforced the Germanic powers must close their markets to the raw materials or manufactured products of the British colonies.
